

NELSON KILLS TWO FEDERAL AGENTS

NRA Chiefs Plan Forcible Imposition of Code on Industry

WASHINGTON—The "all quiet" sign is about to be hauled down on the NRA front.

Plans are being secretly completed by the Blue Eagle rulers for a direct assault on the group of defiant industries hitherto refusing to submit to codes.

The proposed attack will take the form of a forcible imposition of a code on one of the recalcitrants.

Exactly which industry is to receive the contemplated buckshot has not yet been determined. The NRA board expects its club wielding to be met with legal resistance, and it is scanning the field carefully to select the most advantageous battleground.

A number of industries, chief among them telephone, telegraph insurance, tobacco, packers, wholesale druggists, are still uncoded.

During his regime, General Hugh Johnson frequently threatened to impose codes, but never went through with it.

Now his successors have definitely determined to make the test. The Blue Eagle legal division, headed by young Blackwell Smith, believes that it is ready for a trial of strength. And with a session of Congress convening shortly, at which the future fate of the NRA is to be determined, the board has decided that the time has arrived for a showdown.

Presidential Canopy

President Roosevelt has received a letter from a Georgian which follows:

"Dear Mr. President: 'I have just been evicted from my home, and I am writing to ask if you will send me a tent to live in. I would be very proud to show my friends a tent which the President has sent me.'"

Significant Figures

The economics behind the big business drive against the NRA and further labor legislation is tellingly disclosed in certain little-publicized commercial figures.

These statistics show that while industry generally had a flourishing productive period last quarter, this profit margin had been pared considerably.

In other words, while the volume of output and sales maintained an unbroken brisk pace—and sometimes even expanded—the profit side of the ledger revealed a slimmer inflow into the till.

The picture of what occurred is graphically recorded in the following:

The National City Bank of New York reported that from July to October, 165 major corporations showed a 25 per cent decrease in earnings—from $117,000,000 to $87,000,000—as compared with profits for the same months in 1933. During this period the concerns made and sold more goods than last year.

Chrysler Corporation reported that in the first nine months of this year, it sold more automobiles than in any twelve-month period in its history. While taking in $100,000,000 more than it did, January to October 1933 it actually made $2,500,000 less.

To business men these figures mean only one thing—Increased production costs (labor and material) due to the NRA and Section 7c.

Some of the advanced industrialists are accepting these conditions as a necessary readjustment under present economic trends. But the bulk are fearful and alarmed, and are clamorously insisting that the Administration and Congress do something to restore a greater margin of profit.

Virgil Creamean for stealing the automobile of Ralph Leist of S. Court-st.

Harry Curry of New Holland for stealing the automobile of Earle E. Claiborne of the same village.

George Speakman for failure to provide.

Harley Rutter for failure to provide.

F. L. Swank for check forgery.

IDENTITY SECRET

The identity of the person secretly indicted will not be disclosed until a capias has been issued and he has been placed under arrest.

The prisoners who are either in jail or under bond will probably be arraigned before Judge J. W. Atkins Friday or Saturday.

AMERICAN FLIER KILLED IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Nov. 28—Lieut. Edward Dorney, American flier, was killed at the Sungjao air field this afternoon in the crash of a new American-made fighting plane he was demonstrating to government officials.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—An air mail plane, bound for Jacksonville, Fla., from Chicago, crashed near Scottsboro, Ala., and burst into flames early today, the Eastern air lines announced here.

Pilot Robert Chew, 34, of Somerville, Mass., "bailed out" a few minutes before the crash when his motor stalled. His only injury was a sprained ankle.

Three hundred pounds of mail were destroyed.

Chew, a veteran mail pilot has 5,700 hours in the air as a mail flier. He has flown 650,000 miles.

MAN IN MYSTERY IS IDENTIFIED

DUNCANSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 28.—The lifeless body of a man involved in an apparent murder-suicide plot near here was identified today as that of Horace Hughes of San Francisco and Napa, Calif., by Larry Carney, 34-year-old world war veteran of Philadelphia.

Carney said he was certain the man found dead with a woman in a railroad flag stop station at Spring Meadow, near here, Saturday was the person he knew as Horace Hughes in California and whom talked with in Philadelphia on November 19. Carney was unable to identify the woman in the case that authorities believe is linked in some manner with the "babes in the wood" tragedy near Carlisle, Pa.

New Arrivals

Rev. and Mrs. Spurgeon Metzler, E. Franklin-st., announce the birth of a son Tuesday.

Jon Lindbergh—His First Photo

The first picture to be made and published of the infant, Jon Lindbergh, second son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, is presented above by International Illustrated News. Jon, brother of the kidnapped and slain Lindbergh baby, Charles, Jr., was born Aug. 16, 1932. He is pictured outside the kindergarten school in Englewood, N. J., he attends every morning.

Lindbergh Baby Guarded By Mother And Officers

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Fear for the fate of the elder brother he never saw shrouds the life of two-year-old Jon Lindbergh, keeping him ever within a circle of department of justice agents, local police and private detectives—and unceasingly within his mother's sight.

Daily, Anne Morrow Lindbergh steps into her car at 8:30 a. m. to drive her second son to kindergarten. She remains with him, driving back at 1:30 for lunch and a nap. Never does she relax her watch and it is her own capable, mother's hand that clutches Jon's as the two traverse the few steps from car to school.

Should a stranger venture within the guarded circle, he is immediately investigated. For eight weeks recently, department of justice men and police shadowed five men who at intervals were seen lounging about the grounds. They looked like photographers, they said they were photographers, they were photographers—news-paper photographers trying to snap a "first picture" of little Jon.

But before they go through, the department of justice men know their automobile license numbers and even full knowledge of all their movements during the eight weeks, off and on, that they had spent seeking the picture.

The photographers learned all about the "investigation" later—at their offices, where they'd been checked.

The picture? They got it, but to do it they had to rent a truck with flap sides, cut holes in the flaps for their lenses and park along the walk where Mrs. Lindbergh walks with Jon to kindergarten.

St. Mary's Man Succeeds Henderson As Adjutant-General; May Direct Relief

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28.—Major Emil F. Marx, 42-year-old safety-service director of St. Mary's, O., and world war veteran, today was appointed Ohio's new adjutant general by Governor-Elect Martin L. Davey.

Maj. Marx will take over the duties as commander-in-chief of the Ohio National guard as now handled by Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson.

Whether Maj. Marx also will take over the important job of directing Ohio's relief activity was not divulged, Davey refusing to affirm or deny that Maj. Marx would handle both phases of the work.

It was believed here that Davey would go to Washington and confer with Harry D. Hopkins, national relief administrator, before reaching a decision on the matter.

MAY KEEP HENDERSON
Davey favors having a civilian assistant to the state's adjutant general handle the relief work and it was thought highly probable here that Henderson would be kept in that capacity. Henderson in his three years at the head of the state relief administration, has conferred frequently with Hopkins in his effort to get the maximum amount of relief money possible for Ohio.

Davey made it an announcement of Marx's appointment from his downtown hotel suite here.

Last night the governor-elect added another name to his official family by appointing Dr. Walter H. Hartung of Toledo as state director of health.

Hartung's selection marks the first time that any person from Lucas-co has been a member of the governor's cabinet in 20 years.

One major cabinet appointment remains to be made—that of highway director. Davey will announce his choice tomorrow. The two other major appointments aside from the cabinet, remaining to be announced are those of superintendent of banking and director of the state department of liquor control.

TURKEY THROW PROVIDES REAL FUN FOR MANY

26 Fowls Released from Roof Tops In First Three Throws

GREAT CROWD HERE

Each Turkey Dedicated to Local Merchant

Circleville had a "turkey throw" Wednesday and despite early apprehension for the safety of the traditional Thanksgiving fowl the party was a real success.

Ten turkeys were thrown into the crowd on N. Court-st from the Weaver building at 10:30 a. m., six more were released from the White furniture store room on E. Main-st, and 10 more were freed only to be caught from the roof of the Mecca restaurant W. Main-st during the afternoon. The final throw of 10 more turkeys was scheduled from the roof of the Albaugh Co., S. Court-st, at 4:30 p. m.

NO TURKEY DAMAGED

Many persons were afraid of the consequences of the throw fearing that many of the turkeys would be maimed but in the first three throws none were damaged to any extent by the great crowd of persons who sought them.

Police officials and members of the sheriff's office were on hand to see that everything went smoothly. There was no trouble of any kind; the person who first had his or her arms around the turkey long enough to call it a capture retained possession. Good sportsmanship prevailed with scores of people filling the streets through the day.

The throw was made possible by merchants of the city in cooperation with The Herald. Each turkey before being released was announced through a loud speaker as a gift of some firm.

NEW THING HERE

A turkey throw is a new thing in Circleville although it has been done with more or less success in other places.

Many of the turkeys showed quite a reluctance to be captured but flew far and wide in an effort to get away. Some were free, but only for a moment.

One of the fowls flew to a wire in front of the American Hotel in the first throw of the day and defied capture until someone with a loop-pole dislodged it. It then flew onto the balcony and was captured.

Even those who didn't catch turkeys enjoyed watching the scramble.

FRENCH DENY JAPAN'S PLEA

Reject Bid to Denounce Washington Naval Treaty; Mussolini Would Too.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—France today rejected Japan's suggestion that this nation join in denunciation of the Washington naval treaty. The government, it was learned, takes the view that the matter does not concern it as France is not participating in the present London naval conversations and is unwilling to become embroiled in the affair.

ROME, Nov. 28.—Premier Benito Mussolini will "politely but flatly" decline Japan's invitation to join her in abrogation of the Washington naval treaty, it was stated in official circles today.

TOKYO, Nov. 28.—The Japanese are prepared to "adapt" their original naval proposals, to which both the United States and Great Britain objected strenuously, to the new British proposals, it was reliably reported today.

The Japanese naval officials were understood to have drawn up a complete plan with figures showing how the Japanese proposal for parity in global tonnage can be fitted in with the British suggestions for qualitative limitation and non-fertilization of the Pacific.

PURVIS' AIDES, HUNTING OUTLAW, SHOT IN ROAD

Dillinger's Death "Avenged" By "Baby Face" When Hollis and Crowley Named as Trigger-men Die; Former Dies Instantly, Latter Later

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Shocked and embittered by the cold machine-gunning of two federal agents, the department of justice today detailed Hugh H. Clegg, stocky departmental inspector, to get George ("Baby Face") Nelson dead or alive—and Clegg's orders are to shoot first.

Clegg will supplant Melvin H. Purvis, head of the Chicago bureau of the department of justice, in the intensified hunt for the notorious killer. He left for the Chicago area today to take command of the search.

"GET NELSON," CRIES PURVIS

"Dead or Alive Makes No Difference," Federal Chief Declares to Aides.

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—"If it's the last thing I do, I'll get Baby Face Nelson—dead or alive."

Melvin E. Purvis, youthful chief of the department of justice here today made this grim pledge as he viewed the bodies of Samuel P. Cowley and Herman E. Hollis, department of justice agents slain in a running gun battle with Nelson, the murderous little machine-gunner of the former John Dillinger gang.

Purvis, his face taut with emotion, immediately gave orders for a nation-wide search to hunt down the desperado who took the lives of his two aides.

It was the consensus of opinion among authorities that Nelson had avenged the killing of Dillinger when he shot down Hollis and Cowley. It was one or the other of these ace agents, observers declared that was responsible for the slaying of the Indiana badman whose escape from a cell in Crown Point electrified officialdom.

One federal agent who heard of the latest of Nelson's escapades was overheard to remark:

"Well, it was Hollis or Cowley who got Dillinger and Nelson got them."

It was quite evident to Purvis that Nelson had murdered his two best agents. He made no secret of the killer's identity. In utter detection, he said:

"I cannot reconstruct this shooting. I don't know what happened. But it was Nelson all right."

Purvis added:

"I asked Cowley pertinent questions during his brief lapses of consciousness."

"When he recognized me he tried hard to speak. He only muttered, unintelligibly, the name—"

"Nelson!"

Then he added, his face hardening:

"Nelson ought to know he hasn't a chance of eventual escape. It's only a matter of time. We aren't particular whether we get him dead or alive."

Martin L. Davey defeated Clarence Brown for governor by 65,466 votes while Vic Donahay's margin over Simon D. Fess was 437,135.

GOMER JONES TO HEAD OHIO STATE SQUAD

257 Pound Center Named By Letter-men; Schmidt Would Change Team Name.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 28.—Gomer T. Jones of Cleveland, 207-pound center on Ohio State University's football team, today had been elected to lead the Buckeyes into their 1935 grid season.

Jones was elected captain of the team by his 17 brother letter-men at the annual football banquet tendered to the members of the team last night. He will succeed Regis Monahan, a senior.

Playing almost every minute of Ohio State's eight games this season, Jones was noted as one of the most powerful centers in Big Ten ranks. Stan Pincura and Dick Heekin were nominated for the captaincy, but were eliminated in later balloting.

OFFERS NO ALIBIS

Coach Francis A. Schmidt, freely predicting a championship season next year, was the speaker at the banquet. He offered no alibi for the one point defeat at Illinois which stood between Ohio State and a share of the Big Ten Conference championship glory.

"We were a little slow in getting started, that was all," Schmidt declared.

Football fans, completely convinced of Coach Schmidt's ability as a football mentor following his successful first season at Ohio State, today were questioning his work as a prophet.

Shortly before the season Schmidt told International News Service that "Ohio will be lucky to play 500 ball this season." The Buckeyes won seven games and lost the eighth by a one-point margin.

"A rip-smortin' animal with long antlers and fire shooting out of its eyes."

That was Coach Schmidt's definition of a "buck." He offered his interpretation today as a reason for changing the nickname of Ohio State gridders from Buckeyes to Bucks.

Schmidt declared that "Buckeyes" had no particular significance, while everyone thought of "Bucks" as valiant animals, especially dangerous when cornered.

GRID SEASON TO END IN STATE

By International News Service

An end to the 1934 collegiate football season in Ohio was to be written tomorrow with the Turkey-Day games.

Although the gridiron menu had but few offerings, those of the cards were traditional, grudge battles. Where, no college games were scheduled, the fans planned to watch high school encounters.

One of the highlights of the schedule tomorrow was the Miami-Cincinnati game at Cincinnati tomorrow when more than 20,000 fans are expected to turn out to watch the fight for the leadership in the Buckeye conference. If Cincinnati wins, it can claim the championship, but if it loses it will be dropped into third place. The rivalry between the two schools started before the turn of the century.

Another traditional battle was the Wittenberg-Dayton clash. Although Wittenberg had the weakest team in years, students and alumni of the college promised to turn out strong for the annual classic. Equally as bitter was to be the struggle between John Carroll and Western Reserve at Cleveland.

About This And That

BY THE SECOND GUESSER

WHITE WINS HONOR

The United Press today announced its all-Buckeye conference team and named Howard White at a halfback position. Other Wesleyan players on the team are Overturf center and Turley halfback who is also named captain—Smith, Kennaw, Mills and Mohler of Wesleyan are on the second team.

2 GAMES WATCHED

The football games scheduled tomorrow that will draw more attention here are those between the Detroit Lions and Chicago Bears going on the air at 10 a. m. and the Miami-Cincinnati fray in the latter city. The Detroit team must win or be eliminated from any chance for the national title, while the Miami victory over Cincinnati would give Ohio Wesleyan and Miami a tie for the BAA title.

CAGERS IN ACTION

The cage season was pried open at the high school this afternoon with Washington-Twp and the Tiger cagers tangling in a practice session—There is still much hope for an independent cage team here but nothing definite has yet been done.

JONES IS POPULAR

Selection of Gomer Jones fat boy center as captain of Ohio State's football team for 1935 was surprising to us although mighty pleasing—Jones is a roly-poly type of football player but a splendid one and a mighty good team leader—His cheerfulness kept the line in good spirits through the entire season—At the start of this year Jones was believed not good enough for the team—With interest we read that Coach Francis Schmidt wants to change the name of the Ohio team from Buckeyes to Bucks—That's all their called anyway, Francis, so why not let it go at that.

"NAVY BILL" QUILTS POST

California Mentor to Enter Business; First Assistant Is Given Post.

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 28.—Resignation of William A. ("Navy Bill") Ingram as head football coach at the University of California and appointment of Leonard B. ("Stub") Allison, his assistant for four years, as his successor, came with such suddenness that northern California fans were still gasping today.

Late yesterday afternoon it was rumored Ingram would tender his resignation last night at a specially called meeting of athletic officials at California. At 1 p. m. Ingram officially tendered his resignation to William W. Monahan, graduate manager. At 10:45 a. m. it was announced that Allison had been named head football coach and had been given a three-year contract, effective immediately.

It was also announced that Ingram was retiring to enter the business world.

Ingram's resignation came as a distinct surprise following his amazing fashion in which his team wound up the present season. The Bears, unable to show their full strength until the annual "big game" last Saturday with their ancient rivals, the Stanford Cardinals put up a grand battle, losing 9 to 7 to the Cards.

The executive committee dispensed with dickerings with coaches in all parts of the country and gave spontaneous recognition to the general assistant coach under Ingram.

P. CONSTABLE TO HEAD PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 28.—Pepper Constable of Baltimore, Md., was the new captain of the Princeton football team today and a custom which had prevailed at old Nassau since 1915 had been cast overboard. Constable, fullback of the last two Tiger elevens, is the first backfield man to be elevated to the captaincy since Frank Glick quarterback of the 1915 team, was chosen. Constable was elected at a meeting of the Princeton football letter men last night.

TWO AGENTS KILLED

another and he shot down Crowley. The federal agents had time to fire but a few shots before they pitched forward, Hollis dead and Crowley critically wounded.

Nelson's companion was believed to have been wounded in the leg by the federal men.

LOOKED AT BODY

As the agents fell to the ground, Nelson walked over to Hollis, looked at him, and then signed to the other indicating Hollis was dead.

The wounded bandit climbed behind the wheel of the federal men's car. Nelson called to his wife who crawled out of the ditch and also entered the agent's automobile. Then Nelson stowed the two machine guns used in the gun battle in the car, walked back to his own machine, procured two more machine guns, four rifles, and a quantity of ammunition, loaded them in the federal auto, climbed in, and the machine roared away.

In Nelson's abandoned car was found evidence the gang was either planning a long trip, or was preparing to stock up on one of its hideouts. There were three suitcases containing men's clothing, several tons of motor oil, two briefcases, one containing rifle and shotgun ammunition and machine gun drums, and six sets of automobile license plates from as many states.

Two men were being held in connection with the gun battle today. They are Clarence Leader, garage owner, and Lester Huston, saloon keeper. Police refused to say why they are under arrest. Chicago police identified Nelson's companion as a Chicago gangster known as "Bo." Five special squads conducted swift raids on gangster haunts through the night, five of them on former Dillinger hideouts on the north side.

Purvis revealed that two federal agents passed the Nelson car on the highway but did not recognize the gangster, just 10 minutes before Crowley and Hollis engaged the killers in the gun battle.

The battle climaxed a 60-day search for Nelson and his henchmen in northern Illinois and throughout Wisconsin.

PURVIS WAS SAVED

Melvin Purvis was to have accompanied Crowley and Hollis. Purvis revealed, but a last-minute appointment delayed him.

Purvis is reported to have said to Crowley:

"You go ahead Sam; I'll be along in another car."

Cowley was rushed to a hospital at Elgin and prepared for an operation. But before he would submit he asked:

"Have you called Purvis? I want to talk to him before I die."

Cowley would not make any statement, even to physicians, refusing to report to anyone but his chief.

When Purvis arrived he held a whispered conversation with Cowley, then announced:

"Baby Face" Nelson was the driver of the car. We think the woman was his wife. We don't know who the other man was."

Purvis spent the night at the hospital, directing the Nelson hunt from a room near that occupied by the dying Cowley.

Questions and Answers
Is it possible to add chocolate to a plain cake recipe without varying the recipe? If changes are necessary, please explain why.

It is not necessary to have a special recipe for a chocolate cake, but it is important to make certain changes in the recipe because of the properties of chocolate. A one-ounce square of chocolate for each cup of flour in the recipe gives a rich color and flavor. Each square of chocolate contains about 1 tablespoon of fat, so a corresponding amount may be omitted from the amount of shortening in the recipe. Otherwise the cake will be too rich and crumbly. Each square contains a certain amount of starch and to offset this, one extra tablespoon of milk should be added to the recipe. Without the liquid, the cake would probably peak and crack on the top. The last change is the temperature for baking. Chocolate burns easily, so bake the chocolate cake in an oven 25 degrees cooler than you would use ordinarily.

Should candles be used on a table for luncheon meals?

Candles may be used to add color and brilliancy to a dinner table, but the candles should not be used at lunch time unless the dining room is so dark that artificial light is actually required.

My canned vegetables show a ring of white deposit around the bottom of the jar. Is it too late to correct this now, I realize, but what can you suggest to avoid it next year?

It is quite possible that the white deposit was caused by the kind of salt you used. For canning you should select any good grade of bag salt or a clean coarse fine salt. It is quite possible that the table salt you used had starch added to it, in order to make a more free-running salt for table use.

How should pickles, sauces or condiments be served where table service is very simple?

Remove sauces and condiments to small glass dishes and accompany them with small serving spoons or forks. They should not be served in the containers in which they are purchased.

How should an angel food cake be frosted to prevent crumbs of the crust from discoloring the frosting?

There is a particular method used for frosting an angel food cake that differs from the frosting methods commonly employed for other cakes. This method is sometimes called "pecking." A rolling sort of motion is used, brushing the cake all over the top and around the sides, to remove the browned part of the crust. Then the cake is ready for frosting, and since the crust has already been removed, the frosting will not cause it to peel any more.

What would you recommend for removing an ink spot from a child's colored dress?

Removing ink from colored fabrics is always hazardous because it may be that the ink is more resistant than the dye coloring the fabric. This home method may be successful for a few hours in milk, ink spot for a few hours in milk, changing the milk as it becomes discolored. Another method is to cover the spot with a paste made of dry mustard and cold water, and let stand for 15 minutes. The spot will usually disappear when it is washed. The treatment followed by oxalic acid is likely to be too severe to remove the ink without weakening the color. When the stain has been removed, it is a good idea to wash the garment thoroughly with warm water and soap.

MT. VERNON JOINS NEW GRID LEAGUE

GALION, Nov. 28.—The application of Mt. Vernon high school for membership in the North Central Ohio athletic association was approved unanimously today at a meeting of league officials.

The membership will become effective with the 1935 football season. Other schools in the loop were Galion, Mansfield, Marion, Shelby and Ashland.

KERR STAYS OUT OF CONTROVERSY

HAMILTON, N. Y., Nov. 28.—Andy Kerr, coach of Colgate's spectacular Red Raiders, declined to be drawn into a controversy today over his eleven's chances of playing Stanford in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena next New Year's day.

Said Kerr: "I am not in a position to state whether Colgate would accept a bid to the Rose Bowl. We have not received an invitation, and until we get one we are not ready to say what the decision might be. As a matter of fact, it's not up to me, but to President Cutten, the faculty and the advisory council."

MANY COMMUNITY CHESTS FILLED

By International News Service. All Ohio breathed easier today as Community fund campaigns closed their collection books and various chairmen announced either the goal had been reached or had come close enough to it to call the campaign a success.

Throughout the northern part of the state, the poor, the sick, and the unemployed saw their battle against the elements of a long winter lessened through the huge sums raised in the various community fund campaigns in the cities.

In Cleveland, the city that is known as the great grandfather of community funds, a chest of $3,026,747.28 was filled, missing the goal of $3,500,000 by quite a bit, but termed a success, nevertheless.

Canton, with 600 workers in the field making a heroic last effort, went over the goal set with a chest of $281,123.70, about $123 over the amount set.

In Warren, the fund campaign failed to reach the goal set when it was announced that $86,993 was raised in a drive for $104,777. Berea, on the outskirts of Cleveland, finished its drive last night, $1,102 short of its $5,000 goal.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 28.—The Ohio liquor control board disclosed today that it plans to launch a campaign against misbranded and misleading labels on whiskey and wines sold under its supervision.

GOAL IS NEARER

COLUMBUS, Nov. 28.—With final reports of workers scheduled for tonight when all will participate in dinner the Columbus Community fund was $198,077 short of its goal today. The six-day total now stands at $438,422.76, ahead of last year.

HEALTH SALE OPENS FRIDAY

Christmas Seals Placed In Hands of Number of Workers; Reports Are Filed.

The Pickaway-co health league will begin its drive on Friday, Nov. 30, Mrs. Fannie B. Kirk, executive secretary, announced today.

Workers have been assigned in all parts of the city and county and are ready for the starting time.

The activities of the health league are outlined in the following circular:

"This league is a voluntary organization made up of people of Pickaway County interested in any phase of health work.

"It consists of a President, two Vice Presidents, Treasurer, Secretary and Executive Secretary, elected at the regular annual meeting.

"These officers and five others chosen shall constitute an executive committee.

"These officers are to sponsor the Christmas Health Seal Sale and take charge of all funds raised through the sale of seals, donations, etc., and use the same for health work among school children, X-rays for tubercular patients, as designated by Dr. C. C. Beale, our health commissioner and Miss Charlotte Phelps, our city nurse. All funds must be passed upon by the executive committee at one of its regular meetings. Work by the league has been done in all townships of the county. Much more being spent in some of the townships than the amount of their seal sale.

"The league takes care financially of those cases coming to the notice of the Health Commissioner, whose parents are unable to take care of such.

"The advisory committee consists of the Superintendents of Schools, and Health Commissioners of the city and county.

"During the year X-rays for tubercular patients, examinations and operations for adenoids and tonsils, dental care, glasses for school children and rooms at Berger hospital, was taken care of by our league.

"Health day program in the schools will be Dec. 14. Each pupil will be given an opportunity to buy one or more seals.

MRS WINNER DIES

Funeral services will be Friday at 2 p. m. at the home in Mühlenberg-twp near Darbyville for Mrs. Ellen Winner, 75, who died Monday.

She is survived by three daughters, five sons, three brothers and two sisters and a number of grand and great-grandchildren.

Interment will be in Darbyville cemetery.

STOUT BOY HOME

Marvin Stout, 15, of near South Bloomfield, was returned to his home Tuesday afternoon after being found near the Hartman farm. He was caught while running through a field.

The boy was the object of a strenuous search Monday evening when it was feared he might have fallen into the Scioto river while running his traps.

Finally there will be two parties: Those who get public money, and those who pay the bill.

200 Attend Annual Inspection of Circleville Chapter O. E. S.

A very successful meeting and one long to be remembered by members of Circleville chapter Order of the Eastern Star was held in the Masonic temple, Tuesday evening, when 200 gathered for the chapter's annual installation of officers.

The meeting was preceded by a turkey dinner at 6 o'clock. The dining room was lovely in a color scheme of yellow and white with baskets and bud vases of yellow chrysanthemums centering the tables which were lighted with white candles.

The regular meeting was opened by the retiring worthy matron, Mrs. Leslie May. After the usual opening the following distinguished guests were presented:

C. C. Chapplear, past grand patron; Miss Marie L. Hamilton, grand conductress; Mrs. Erva Edwards of Gallipolis, grand Esther; Mrs. Kate Allen of Newark, grand Electa; P. R. DeVore of Columbus, grand sentinel, and Mrs. Jessie Schausel of Waverly, district deputy matron of district No. 23.

Mrs. Opal Gephart on behalf of the chapter presented the retiring worthy matron, Mrs. May, with a beautiful past matron's jewel and Irvin Gephart in very appropriate words presented the retiring worthy patron, Leslie May with a past patron's jewel.

Mrs. May was also recipient of a beautiful lamp and a lovely quilt presented by Mrs. Pearl Adkins and Mrs. George Foerst, respectively. The lamp was a gift of the officers of 1933 and 34 and the quilt from the O. E. S. sewing club.

Following the business of the chapter, the annual installation of officers was conducted with the following as installing officers:

Miss Marie Hamilton, grand officer; Mrs. Mary L. Johnson, marshal; Mrs. Dora Barnhill, chaplain; Miss Carrie Johnson, organist; Mrs. Mary May, warder and Leslie May, sentinel.

The chapter room was beautifully decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. The installation of the five Star Points was a beautiful floral and candle ceremony in which the new worthy matron, Mrs. Opal S. Gephart, assisted the installing officer. Remarks were given by the distinguished guests.

Miss Hamilton presented the chapter a lovely picture of Robert Morris the founder of the Eastern Star and gifts were presented the installing officers by Mrs. Gephart after which the meeting closed in ritualistic form.

The following officers were installed:

Mrs. Opal S. Gephart, worthy matron; E. I. Gephart, worthy patron; Mrs. Pearl Adkins, associate matron; Earl Hilyard, associate patron; Mrs. Lucy B. Price, secretary; Mrs. Alice B. Cady, treasurer; Mrs. Marie Bennett, conductress; Miss Virginia Marion, associate conductress; Mrs. Gertrude Robinson, chaplain; Mrs. Daisy B. Price, marshal; Mrs. Maxine A. Leist, organist; Miss Elizabeth Tolbert, Adah; Mrs. Virginia S. Thacher, Ruth; Mrs. Margaret Shane, Esther; Mrs. Helen C. Counts, Martha; Mrs. Ruthmary Marion, pro tem Electa; Miss Mary Roth, warder and Sam Morris, sentinel.

Marriages of Heirs Worry Exiled Spanish King

When former King Alfonso XIII of Spain attends the wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina in London, as a royal guest, it should set him to thinking of matches involving his own family. For the deposed Bourbon monarch recently found himself besieged by requests of his children for parental consent to marriages of their own choosing. Several years ago, his eldest son, Prince Alfonso, of the Asturias, married a Cuban commoner. Now Don Jaime, and Don Juan Carlos, heir-apparent, are seeking to tie the marital knot. One of his daughters, Beatriz, is altar-bound.

LARGE CROWD EXPECTED AT THANKSGIVING DANCE

A large crowd is expected to attend the Thanksgiving dance being sponsored by the Elks' club tonight from 9 until 1:30 o'clock at the club.

The hall has been attractively decorated for the affair for which Walt Sears and his orchestra of Chillicothe will play.

A turkey is to be given as a door prize.

Ben H. Gordon is chairman of the committee in charge.

MR. AND MRS. MORRIS TO ENTERTAIN AT DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Morris of Chillicothe and former residents of this city will entertain at dinner Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. H. P. Folsom, this city, Mrs. Delana Marfield, Mrs. Monroe Morris and Ralph Morris and Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard Raper and son, Stoddard of Columbus, all former residents here.

MR. AND MRS. BELL TO HAVE FAMILY DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. John Bell of the Columbus-pk will be hosts at a family dinner Thanksgiving Day at their home. Covers will be laid for Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bell, Miss Charlotte Caldwell, Mr. and Mrs. Felix Caldwell, John Caldwell of this city, Mrs. Florence Renick of Cleveland and Mr. and Mrs. Bell.

MR. AND MRS. PETERS TO HAVE HOLIDAY GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Peters of N. Court-st will entertain with a family dinner at their home Thursday. Enjoying the day will be Mr. and Mrs. Orville Bumgarner and daughters Miriam and Ruth of Westerville, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Bowers and daughter Marilyn Jo of Williamsport, and Miss Doris Peters of Columbus.

MRS. BURNS HOSTESS TO CLUB MEMBERS

Mrs. Melvin Yates was a substituting guest when Mrs. Joseph Burns, Pinckney-st, entertained the members of her bridge club at her home Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Ralph Wallace was presented high score favor at the conclusion of the interesting game in play at two tables. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Glen Geib, S. Scioto-st, will be hostess to the club next week.

MRS. SHOOK ENTERTAINS

Two tables of bridge were assembled at the home of Mrs. George Shook, Jackson-tw, Tuesday afternoon when she entertained the members of her club. Miss Adelia Hoffman and Mrs. Marvin Rhoades were prize winners and Mrs. Wayne Hoover, a guest, was presented a gift.

A dainty salad course was served late in the afternoon. In two weeks the club will meet with Mrs. Joseph Butts of Kings-ton.

BRIDGE CLUB MEETS WITH MRS. THATCHER

Mrs. Lena Thatcher, E. High-st, entertained at bridge at her home Tuesday evening. Guests were members of her three table card club and Mrs. J. Wallace Crist and Mrs. James Stout.

When tallies were added at the close of play Mrs. Mary Morris was presented trophy for high score. Tempting refreshments were served by the hostess.

In two weeks Mrs. Erma Gehres, E. Union-st, will entertain the club.

Richard B. Criswell of Cambridge is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Criswell, S. Court-st.

Royal Guest List Nearly Result in Wedding Delay

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A last-minute squabble between the Duke of Kent and his parents nearly succeeded in postponing his marriage.

From a member of the dashing duke's household comes the following sad story—fortunately with a happy ending.

Handsome George, at one time the naughty-naughty of the royal family, but now lauded as a hero on account of his marriage with the grateful Marina, has had plenty of private worries to mar his public happiness.

To begin with—and it almost ended with his marriage—the Duke is said to have written a number of letters to Sandra Rambeau, his American movie actress playmate of early summer.

Sandra is being worse than tiresome. She is refusing to return them. Furthermore, it is alleged, she threatened to publish them.

It is understood that several of Scotland Yard's "finest" are trailing the blonde movie actress with strict orders to get the letters—or else!

A week ago the Duke of Kent submitted to his parents a list of friends he would like to have invited to his wedding ceremony and reception.

The list bounced back pronto with most of the names struck off. George concluded that there had been a mistake. He put the names back and sent in the list again.

When it caromed back a second time with the same erasures, George's blue blood simmered to the boiling point. Before it cooled he marched into the presence of the King and Queen. In plain language he told them—still according to the source mentioned above—that unless he could have his friends at the wedding, there would be no wedding at all.

"There are only two occasions

in a man's life when he is important," he told his astounded parents. "One is his wedding day and the other is his funeral. I promise you both you may have your own way at my funeral, but on my wedding day I insist on doing as I please—I insist that my friends be invited."

The King and Queen, cornered, gave in. That, dear friends, is how the Earl of Dudley, whose home, Himley Hall, in Staffordshire, is being lent to the royal bride and bridegroom for the first fortnight of their honeymoon, happens to be invited among others of the Duke's personal friends, to the ceremony tomorrow.

Everything is now completely in readiness for the nuptials. The bride's trousseau has been delivered to her suite in Buckingham Palace; the silver lame bridal gown is only waiting to be donned.

The famous Windsor grays brought especially from the royal stables at Windsor Castle to draw the coach wherein the duke and duchess will drive from the palace to Paddington station after the ceremony have been put through their paces and declared hoof perfect.

FEW AMERICANS

Among the few privileged Americans born guests at the wedding and reception will be Lady Cunard, the Duchess of Roxborough; Lady Granard, wife of his majesty's master of horse, who will ride by the side of his majesty in the procession; Lady Ribblesdale, Mrs. Ormonde Lawson Johnson, who will wear a black velvet dress with black silver fox fur cape and a "Marina toque" of black ostrich feathers; and Viscountess Astor, M. P.—Nancy Langhorne of Virginia.

In a Thankful Spirit

The true observance of Thanksgiving Day does not manifest itself in the mere celebration of abundance.

That was not the spirit of the little band that first observed Thanksgiving Day. They had few worldly possessions. But their hearts were rich empires of courage, faith and hope. They did not give thanks for the small blessings of a single day; they were thankful for the possession of health, security, and the strength which they knew would enable them to go forward and conquer the hardships of a New World.

America today gives thanks in this old-time grateful, conquering, forward-looking spirit.

Thanksgiving

On the whole, thank goodness, it seems quite evident that this Thanksgiving Day will be much brighter for almost everyone, but, more important even than that, it seems that, the rigors of depression have taught us all the lesson of this grand old day—in the sense in which the fathers of our nation understood its deeper meaning.

May this Thanksgiving Day be filled with happiness for us all; and may each one of us be able to make the day a little brighter for those less fortunate, who live nearby our homes.

Marian Martin Pattern

PATTERN 9205

Complete, Diagrammed Marian Martin Sew Chart Included.

Winged sleeves and jabot of contrasting color give this smart "at home" frock a different and spirited air. It's a slenderizing dress as well, a slim skirt hung from a nicely pointed yoke back and front. Darts at the shoulders and gathers at the waistline give just enough fullness throughout the bodice to be becoming, and a kick pleat provides walking freedom. Made in wool with pique sleeve wings and jabot, this frock would be tailored enough to use for street wear; made in a pretty printed cotton it would be a charming frock to wear at home. Long sleeves come with the pattern.

Pattern 9205 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric and 1/2 yard contrasting.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for EACH MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your style authority, MARIAN MARTIN. Styles for every age and all occasions. PRICE OF BOOK FIFTEEN CENTS. BOOK AND PATTERN TOGETHER TWENTY-FIVE CENTS.

HANDICAPPED LAW ENFORCEMENT

ATTEMPTS of the postoffice department to put an end to the use of the mails by promoters of lottery devices must be subject to serious handicap. It is confronted by the fact that the offense in such cases is committed by the sender rather than by the recipient of literature concerning gambling schemes, and that there can be no general censorship of mail at the receiving end with a view to the detection of those who make the postal service an agency of games of chance.

Postal inspectors have instigated arrests in five cities in their crusade against gambling. But sweepstakes tickets have circulated freely in hundreds of cities and thousands of lesser communities, partly by use of the mails, and many minor enterprises surreptitiously reach their patrons through the use of the same medium. All this is contrary to law—but so was bootlegging in the days of prohibition.

Law enforcement agency is up against the fact, the discovery of which by officials is recorded in despatches, that "the ordinary person who... bets on races and the like is not in the same class with usual criminals." So patrons of lotteries cannot be picked out of the rogues' gallery, or traced by other manifestations of their criminal tendencies, and that avenue of approach to principals and promoters is barred. The trouble with suppressing gambling, whether it uses the mails or not, lies in the fact that too many people like to gamble.

IN WINTER QUARTERS

ABOUT 365,000 young men, in 1664 camps are preparing to carry on through the coming winter the work of the civilian conservation corps. The program authorized by congress has still some months to run, and it is a virtual certainty that it will be continued beyond the two years of the present project, which automatically expires on March 31. There is still work to be done in the woods, and a great deal of it is not much interrupted by winter weather. But it is more important that there is still need for employment for young men and boys, and for the wholesome exercise and discipline which are a part of life in the CCC.

These modern backwoodsmen are well seasoned now to the outdoors life, and well equipped for the rigors of winter. More than $6,000,000 has been spent to put the forestry camps in shape for cold weather and millions more for the drouth-relief camps.

It costs the nation about $2 a day to keep a young man enrolled in the CCC. According to Robert Fechner, director of the program, "the work has more than justified the cost." Its benefits must be reckoned not only in terms of forest clearance, fire-fighting, tree-planting and stream improvement, but also in the salvage of young manhood.

Scientists can now trace almost everything to its beginning except an old rumor.

Well, then, why didn't people die when the only antiseptic used on a cut was a squirt of tobacco juice.

A just hell for grouches will be a place where they must sit and listen forever to somebody's complaining.

A pipe must make a charming companion. You wouldn't let any other stick around with a smell like that.

Aliens learn our language quicker than the baby does. You see, they aren't asked: "Does um wanta dinky waw-wak?"

There's one consolation. If you give the kid a car and plenty of money and he doesn't go to the dogs, you know he is fool-proof.

How unselfish a husband feels when he refuses to buy much for himself—knowing that his wife will buy it for him and charge it to him.

Being naughty doesn't prove the reformer a hypocrite. No matter how reckless the driver, he is right when he urges you to be careful.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XX

Caroline returned from the university in a cheerful mood. "There's a kick in being on the road, going somewhere," she said to her still disgruntled father, "no matter where it ends."

"It will probably end in your marrying a factory worker, like yourself," he retorted.

Caroline's face clouded. "I wish I could fall in love with Malcolm," she said wistfully. "He's the finest man I've ever known."

"The motorcycle may help," Philip glibbed, "propinquity, you know."

Caroline stared at him. Her clear, level gaze made him uncomfortable. She shook her head. "I've tried to let myself think that way," she said with startling honesty, "but it's something deeper he stirs in me. He hasn't kissed me, and I don't want him to."

"Afraid you'll be trapped, physically?"

"Not afraid. I wanted to find out how it is I feel about him, I mean. If I'd wanted him to kiss me I'd have quit, because I know I don't love him."

Her father uttered a sound of disbelief. "With all respect for your modesty, my dear, do you mean to say you've never been kissed by any one but Howard?"

The name was like a blow to Caroline. She was silent for a moment before she answered. Then, "Of course I have," she said evenly, "but Malcolm is different. I'm serious about him. It may sound silly to you but there's something idealistic about our friendship. If merely being near him could give me the kind of thrill that you suggest leads to marriage I'd be terribly disappointed."

"Still clinging to that hopeless attachment for Howard?"

"Not clinging. I'd give anything to forget him and fall in love with Malcolm."

"That's absurd," her father snapped. "I profoundly hope your love endures until the right man comes along."

Caroline smiled. "In the meantime," she said with a sudden turn to lightness, "I've my lunch to put up." She started toward the kitchen.

"Before you go," he stopped her, "could you at me have five dollars? I'm short of change."

Caroline obliged. It was not the first time she had given him of her small wages. But she never asked questions, sparing them both embarrassment, because in her mind was a growing conviction that he had got himself into a muddle which he was ashamed to confess. It would shame her too to admit to him her fear of his incompetence.

She worried in secret, felt asleep thinking that she must succeed in something bigger than factory work if they were ever to get away from Edge Street.

The next morning she was so silent when Malcolm called for her that he thought she was subdued by the idea of riding to work on a motorcycle. The gay humor which had seemed to him appropriate to the occasion turned to a blue reserve. Caroline, quick to feel his sensitiveness, brought herself out of her depressed mood, and re-established their usual cheerful companionship.

It was fun to ride on the motorcycle. The early morning blue roses into her cheeks and exhilaration into her spirits. She plied people who lay abed, developing hangover headaches, some of them, getting up to go out in the dead of the day and poky motor cars.

Malcolm turned to glance back at her now and then and pass a word of banter. Her answering laughter was unfeigned. She might as well be enjoying herself. She might stand all day at a machine that pasted labels on glass jars and think with acute longing of the breeze-swept golf course at the country club, but just now she had no wish to be anywhere in the world but with Malcolm on his motorcycle.

It was a fresh June morning. Traces of dew still lingered in shady spots. The air was sweet even in the grubby streets they traversed to reach the factory. When they arrived and Malcolm said, "Well, how did you like it?" Caroline replied that they must go some Sunday morning to a lake in the hills and have a picnic breakfast.

"We can take our lunch pails now," he told her, "and hop over to a park that's about a mile from here and eat under the trees."

"Today?"

"Heavenly!" Caroline exclaimed. "I'll meet you here two seconds after the whistle blows."

The cars and motorcycles belonging to the factory employees were parked in an enclosure which, because of the hilly topography of the land, was laid at the side of the main building, close to the front. Those who used the entrance to the executive offices could easily be observed by anyone in the workers' parking ground.

True to her word, Caroline was there, waiting by Malcolm's motorcycle shortly after twelve o'clock. Malcolm was delayed. Caroline got out her compact and powdered her nose, a rite she had not stopped for in the hat room.

A long, gleaming car purred up the main drive. Caroline caught a glimpse of it in her mirror and flashed around on an impulse she could not stay.

Her eyes remained glued on it and she was simply rooted to the spot, although her mind accepted the fact that it would be disastrous to her for the young man in the car to see her there—to discover that she was working under an assumed name in his father's factory.

It was the first time she had seen Howard since that fateful day when she had broken their engagement. Her eyes were hungry for him.

He did not glance her way—a delivery for which she breathed a silent prayer of gratitude. She watched him, without moving, as he got out of his car, flung the door to behind him and ran jauntily up the steps to the building entrance. He was a trifle thinner, perhaps, and tanned to a beautiful bronze. He looked as she remembered him—something like a model for good clothes. His light grey suit—had Park Avenue tailor stamped in every line of it and his soft Panama hat looked fine enough to be drawn through a finger ring.

Caroline held her breath until he had vanished from her sight. And in her heart was a new hurt. There was no touch of sadness about Howard. His air was that of a self-satisfied man. The loss of a sweetheart had apparently left no shadow at all upon his life.

A tear she could not suppress sneaked out of her eyes and might have trickled down her cheeks leaving a telltale mark had she not seen Malcolm approaching. Malcolm in his loose-fitting working clothes, somehow looking as though they were only a disguise for him. Hastily Caroline wiped the tears away and smiled at him, chided him for keeping her waiting.

"How did you know our coach and four wouldn't turn into a pumpkin?" she demanded.

Malcolm's glance fell upon Howard's car. "It will—some day," he said seriously, "and when it does it's going to be a pumpkin like that bus over there. Beauty, isn't it?"

"I don't think so," Caroline declared and laughed at her snippy tone.

"Of course I know you're spoiled after this coach and four," Malcolm said, grinning, "but you wouldn't refuse to ride in a pumpkin, would you? Because I'm going to have one. Guess what kept me."

"I'm just out of guesses. There weren't any fresh ones on the market this morning."

"I was in conference with the supe. I'm going up in the world. Have another department to inspect the powders."

"You aren't leaving the cold creams?" Caroline asked in dismay.

"The powders are additional. The next step is into the supe's shoes factory manager."

"It sounds fearfully important."

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Hide-Out," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opening tonight at the Cliftona Theatre, is heralded as one of those wholesome film productions which leave a lasting impression upon those who see it.

It deals with a happy-go-lucky post-repeller racketeer who, believing he has everything one could wish for in life—money, without working for it, romance and pleasure—comes to his senses after he has been driven from New York by the police, only to find real love and happiness in a rural environment.

The picture is said to be crammed with all of the excitement and glamour of Big Town life and the purity and simple existence of a rural community.

As "Lucky" Wilson, the playboy, Robert Montgomery has a made-to-order role. Reluctantly he is compelled to find a country hide-out to escape arrest and to recover from a bullet wound, but he soon becomes entranced with the country when he meets Maureen O'Sullivan, cast in the role of a farmer's daughter.

AT THE GRAND

Warner Baxter returns to town Wednesday and Thursday at the Grand theatre in "Such Women are Dangerous." Supporting him are Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson, Mona Barrie, Herbert Mundin and Henrietta Crossman.

"It is. So don't let me catch you passing any crooked labels, young lady."

"Your success is assured in my hands," Caroline told him. "But do you mind hurrying away from here? That one o'clock whistle will be calling us back before you know it."

"Right you are. And Ma put in a strawberry tart for you. How's that for a fairy godmother?"

Caroline wouldn't tell him she'd lost her appetite, so she nibbled at her sandwiches and ate the tart, and was surprised to find that she relished it.

They were sitting under a willow by a brook. Caroline's radiant spirit of the morning and her false cheerfulness were gone beyond her power to recall. Malcolm saw that some secret trouble had claimed her. When the lunch was finished he smoked in silence, forbearing to press words upon her attention.

What was he to think, anyway? he asked himself, watching her as she stared meditatively into the clear water that whispered over the stones at her feet.

He felt a million miles away from her. It was little solace to him at that moment to dwell upon the warmth of her attitude to others. What else could she be, but tolerant and friendly, he demanded of his judgment, when he was always around doing his good deeds. She was kind, fair, not a snob like her father. How else could a girl like that treat him if she did not want to cut him altogether?

Caroline, absorbed in her thoughts, was unaware that she had spoiled their hour, thrown him into a study as deep as her own and filled him with doubts of himself, made his small rise at the factory a negligible achievement in his eyes.

"Some day," he told himself bleakly, "I'll kiss her if I'm not careful, and then what will happen? The end of little Willie!"

The thought was devastating. "Before you do that, you idiot, you'd better take that other job and keep away from her."

This was something he had not told Caroline—that he'd had a chance to go with Dunworth's competitor at a better salary and had refused it to be near her.

She looked up at him suddenly, impersonally, and asked him a question.

"Malcolm, what's the best seller the factory produces?"

Malcolm was nonplussed. Had she, then, been dreaming of factory products? It stirred his sense of humor—he wanted to laugh, and did smile. He'd been holding his heart out to her—and her mind had been occupied with soaps and powders. But it was a relief, too. Better soaps and powders than some other man.

"The laundry crystals, I suppose," he answered.

"Are they good?"

"As good as any."

"Could they be improved?"

"I doubt it."

"What makes the most money?"

"Probably a face mask. You ought to know about that—it's the famous Rutledge formula."

"I know about it, yes, but not about others. Are there any others as good?"

"If there are the public doesn't know it. Between you and me I think the factory is kept going on the mask. The profits on the soaps and powders wouldn't do it; they're too close. The velvet in the cosmetics."

"Then if some one came along with a better mask and the public found it out it would be a fine thing for the person who owned the formula."

"It would be a gold mine—if it were really good, marvelous, as some of the girls at the factory say. There are plenty of so-so preparations—none that caught on like the Rutledge Mask. The way it swept the country was about like wildfire, but of course it didn't continue to sell like that. It holds as well as anyone could expect, though."

Progress in The War on Cancer

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

FOR YEARS with many persons the very word "cancer" has aroused a feeling of horror. The disease is still dreaded, of course, but I am glad to say that increased knowledge has eliminated a great deal of unnecessary worry.

Though the actual cause of cancer has not yet been discovered, various methods of treatment for this formerly incurable affliction are now known. I do not mean that all forms of cancer are curable.

But in most instances if the disease is recognized in its early stages, it yields to surgical, radium or X-ray treatment.

When cancer is pronounced incurable, it is a case in which there was oversight or neglect of the disease in its beginning. Unfortunately, cancer may be confused with other disturbances and not be recognized until it has reached an advanced stage. For this reason, the Society for the Prevention of Cancer urges that the public be educated in the early symptoms of the disease. Likewise, the public should be familiarized with the many possibilities of cure.

Over a quarter of a century ago the discovery of radium was made by those eminent French scientists, Becquerel and the Curies. Since then radium has played an important part in the treatment of cancer. Its rays are capable of destroying the cancer cells. Of course, radium must be used and handled with extreme care.

In many cases surgery is resorted to in the treatment and cure of cancer. When it is possible the diseased portion of the body should be removed. For example, when cancer of the stomach, intestine, bladder, rectum or other portion of the body is recognized in its early stages, prompt surgical measures result in removal of the localized disease. But if the tumor or cancerous growth has existed for a long period, operative results are rarely beneficial.

This is explained by the fact that when a cancerous tumor grows it tends to creep into adjacent tissues or to liberate cancerous cells into the blood stream. The latter process is medically termed "metastasis." It is the later stage of cancer that is to be feared and this can be avoided only by early detection of the disease.

Heed Early Symptoms

As a rule, persons who are likely to succumb to cancer are those who have the disease for some time before it is recognized and treated. Since cancer often strikes without warning one can guard against it only by paying attention to every unusual symptom, regardless of how trivial it may seem.

For example, in persons above the age of thirty-five, any sore that does not heal, especially about the nose, mouth or lips, should arouse suspicion of cancer. Continued attacks of bleeding, or abnormal discharge from any of the orifices of the body, must be regarded as suggestive. Persistent indigestion, loss of weight, presence of a lump or swelling, should be sufficient reason to consult with a physician. It is always best to learn whether your suspicion is well founded or what is for most

CHIMNEYS CAN GIVE TROUBLE IF BADLY BUILT

Fire Hazard Accentuated By
Faulty Flues; Smoke
Causes Given.

Property owners are urged to make a careful inspection of their chimneys before the winter season begins.

Attention is called to the fact that defective chimneys are responsible for much of the annual home fire loss, especially on farms, and that chimney fires are most frequent in early autumn when fires are first built.

Repairing and replacing defective or inadequate chimneys are a part of the Modernization Program of the FHA, which points out that the best time to modernize chimneys is before cold weather sets in.

Every chimney should be inspected before the first fire of autumn is built, it is stated, because bird nests or other obstructions may have accumulated in it during the summer, or bricks and mortar may have become loosened. If the fireplace persisted in smoking last winter, or if there is possibility of insufficient insulation, a chimney expert should be called in to make the inspection.

Some Common Faults

Some of the more frequent structural faults of chimneys are pointed out by FHA officials.

One frequent fault is lack of sufficient height to cause a good draft. Wind frequently blows down the chimney when the top is below the ridge of a peak roof. The top of the chimney should be two feet higher than the ridge of a peak roof and three to four feet higher than a flat roof.

Another frequent fault, lies in the chimney lining. Few chimneys have special linings and the gases from the fire disintegrate the mortar. The smoother the lining of the chimney, the better its draft. Fire clay lining is among the most efficient materials providing a smooth surface and also protecting the bricks and mortar from disintegration.

Openings into the chimney shaft should be as few as possible, one opening being the best, and care

Housing Question Box

Q. I want to build new chicken houses to accommodate about 200 birds. What type would be most satisfactory from the standpoint of economy and convenience?

A. The shed type of house would probably suit your needs best. It is usually built facing the South, with windows on the southern side and with a roof that slopes slightly downward toward should be taken to prevent any air leaks in the cleanout door at the chimney base.

Where to Place Chimney

When flues are connected with the chimney shaft, a frequent fault is to allow the flue to project into the chimney. It should be flush with the chimney wall in order to get a satisfactory draft.

Faulty construction of the "throat" of the fireplace, where it connects with the chimney, sometimes is the cause of a smoky fire-place, the commonest fault being lack of an adequate smoke shelf.

If extensive remodeling is planned, it is well to remember that the best place for a chimney is in the center of the building, or at least protected from direct contact with the outer air. A cold chimney does not draw as well as a warm one.

FARMERS TURN ATTENTION TO HOME REPAIRS

Crops Harvested, Rural Property Owners Undertake Improvement Work.

Crops harvested, and pressing fall work out of the way, farmers throughout the country are now turning their attention to the task of repairing, remodeling and rebuilding their homes, barns and other buildings. They are changing and improving their equipment so as to make for greater comfort and efficiency—work that has been neglected for the past five years, because of reduced farm income.

With financial institutions and manufacturers now cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration by making insured loans for modernization and repair of these properties, observers in the East and Middle West report rapidly increasing reconditioning activity on rural properties.

In addition to remodeling homes, rooms are being added, heating plants, electricity with appliances and bath facilities are being installed so that old houses look strictly modern. Cellars are being floored with concrete and rearranged, providing room for laundry and work shop and storage space for seeds, canned goods and preserves. Leaky roofs on both farms and barns are being repaired or replaced; new fencing is being built, feeding floors laid—in fact, reports from Indiana, Iowa, Illinois and other Corn Belt states reveal many farmers doing their own work or overseeing the job with no small amount of satisfaction.

With few exceptions farmers generally are found to be able to comply with the provisions of the project. The special feature permitting them to repay the loans in season is particularly appealing because of the improved outlook of agriculture as a whole.

In several places visited, farmers were doing their own work, especially painting. Rebuilding was left to skilled mechanics. Under the terms of the project, a borrower may take cash, buy materials and necessities where and when he likes; and make the repairs himself. He can have a contractor do the work and the lending agency pay him or he can have a contractor do the work and give him a note which he, in turn, will sell to the lending agency.

the North. The advantage of this type is that it is cheap to erect and may be built as long (from East to West) as needed and lengthened easily whenever necessary. It is generally divided into partitions about 20 ft. square with wire mesh.

Q. There are several doors in my house that rattle. Can I fix them myself without removing the doors? If so, how?

A. This condition can be corrected by moving the strike plate back toward the stop, thus removing the play between the latch and strike plate.

Q. I weatherstripped my house throughout last winter, but the house remained cold. What is the trouble?

A. There may be many reasons for this condition. Your heating plant may be undersized, either with regard to boiler or radiation. You may be losing heat through roof and side-walls. There may be cracks around window and door frames. Have an expert examine your house and advise you.

Q. I own 10 small houses, all un-mortgaged and rented, and in a year's time would have the $3,000 necessary to repair and modernize them. However, I want to do the work immediately. Can a special ruling be made in my case, or will I have to be limited to a $2,000 loan?

A. A bulletin issued recently by the Federal Housing Administration says:

"No property owner may obtain credits to improve more than five separate pieces of property (not exceeding $2,000 principal amount of obligation on each property) without the prior approval of the Federal Housing Administration."

Q. I plan to build an addition to my house which will cost about $3,000. Can I get an FHA insured loan of $2,000 to help finance the work?

A. You may apply for a $2,000 loan to help finance a $3,000 building project.

Q. As I sell a seasonal product, my income is much greater during one part of the year than during the other months. Would I be permitted to make seasonal payments on a modernization loan under the terms of the National Housing Act?

A. The National Housing Act provides that only farmers may make seasonal payments. All others must pay monthly.

LABOR HELPED MOST

76 Per Cent of Modernization Funds Go to Workers.

Labor gets the lion's share of the dollars that are going into the modernization and repair work being done under the Better Housing Program of the Federal Housing Administration, say official reports.

The larger part of labor's share goes to residents of the community in which the work is done. They get 44 cents out of every dollar.

Factory, mill, and dealer labor get 21 cents out of every dollar.

LEAKING RADIATOR VALVES AT FAULT

In 62 per cent of winter heating troubles, leaky radiator vent valves on one-pipe steam systems have been at fault, according to a survey made during a cold spell last winter. In 23 per cent of the cases studied, the trouble was caused wholly or in part by undersized or antiquated boilers. In 18 per cent, the boilers needed repairs, 15 per cent disclosed a lack of sufficient radiation, and in 12 per cent of the cases, the trouble was traced to improper piping. Some of the other causes discovered were poor drafts from dirty chimneys or chimneys of the wrong size or height, improper firing, and unsuitable fuel.

Careful diagnosis by a competent heating expert is the only way to determine what adjustments are necessary. If the estimate for repairing the system is too large a sum to be paid conveniently at one time, desirable loans planned by the Federal Housing Administration may be had from local financial agencies working in conjunction with the Better Housing Program.

spent in this work. Labor at sources of material, such as mines and forests get seven cents and transportation labor four cents, making a total to labor of all types of 76 cents.

The remaining 24 cents goes to building supply dealers, to manufacturers, for raw material and for transportation.

NELSON KILLS TWO FEDERAL AGENTS

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

WASHINGTON—The "all quiet" sign is about to be banded down on the NRA front.

Plans are being secretly completed by the Blue Eagle rulers for a direct assault on the group of defiant industries hitherto refusing to submit to codes.

The proposed attack will take the form of a forcible imposition of a code on one of the recalcitrants.

Exactly which industry is to receive the contemplated buckshot has not yet been determined. The NRA board expects its club wielding to be met with legal resistance, and it is scanning the field carefully to select the most advantageous battleground.

A number of industries, chief among them telephone, telegraph, insurance, tobacco, packers, wholesale druggists, are still uncooperative.

During his regime, General Hugh Johnson frequently threatened to impose codes, but never went through with it.

Now his successors have definitely determined to make the test. The Blue Eagle division, headed by young Blackwell Smith, believes that it is ready for a trial of strength. And with a session of Congress convening shortly, at which the future fate of the NRA is to be determined, the board has decided that the time has arrived for a showdown.

Presidential Canopy

President Roosevelt has received a letter from a Georgian which follows:

"Dear Mr. President: I have just been evicted from my home, and I am writing to ask if you will send me a tent to live in. I would be very proud to show my friends a tent which the President has sent me."

Significant Figures

The economies behind the big business drive against the NRA and further labor legislation is tellingly disclosed in certain little-publicized commercial figures.

These statistics show that while industry generally had a flourishing productive period last quarter, this profit margin had been pared considerably.

In other words, while the volume of output and sales maintained an unbrokenly brisk pace—and sometimes even expanded—the profit side of the ledger revealed a slimmer inflow into the till.

The picture of what occurred is graphically recorded in the following:

The National City Bank of New York reported that from July to October, 165 major corporations showed a 25 per cent decrease in earnings—from $117,000,000 to $87,000,000—as compared with profits for the same months in 1933. During this period the company made and sold more goods than last year.

Chrysler Corporation reported that in the first nine months of this year, it sold more automobiles than in any twelve-month period in its history. While taking in $100,000,000 more than it did, January to October 1933 it actually made $2,500,000 less.

To business men these figures mean only one thing—increased production costs (labor and material) due to the NRA and Section 7.

Some of the advanced industrialists are accepting these conditions as a necessary readjustment under present economic trends. But the bulk are fearful and alarmed, and are clamorously insisting that the Administration and Congress do something to restore a greater margin of profit.

Harley Rutter for failure to provide.

F. L. Swank for check forgery.

IDENTITY SECRET

The identity of the person secretly indicted will not be disclosed until a capias has been issued and he has been placed under arrest.

The prisoners who are either in jail or under bond will probably be arraigned before Judge J. W. Atkins Friday or Saturday.

AMERICAN FLIER KILLED IN CHINA

SHANGHAI, Nov. 28.—Lieut. Edward Dorney, American flier, was killed at the Sungjiao air field this afternoon in the crash of a new American-made fighting plane he was demonstrating to government officials.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—An air mail plane, bound for Jacksonville, Fla., from Chicago, crashed near Scottsboro, Ala., and burst into flames early today, the Eastern air lines announced here.

Pilot Robert Chew, 34, of Somerville, Mass., "bailed out" a few minutes before the crash when his motor stalled. His only injury was a sprained ankle.

Three hundred pounds of mail were destroyed.

Chew, a veteran mail pilot has 5,700 hours in the air as a mail flier. He has flown 650,000 miles.

MAN IN MYSTERY IS IDENTIFIED

DUNCANSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 28.—The lifeless body of a man involved in an apparent murder-suicide plot near here was identified today as that of Horace Hughes of San Francisco and Napa, Calif., by Larry Carney, 34-year-old world war veteran of Philadelphia.

Carney said he was certain the man found dead with a woman in a railroad flag stop station at Spring Meadow, near here, Saturday was the person he knew.

Horace Hughes in California, and whom talked with in Philadelphia on November 19, Carney was unable to identify the woman in the case that authorities believe is linked in some manner with the "babes in the wood" tragedy near Carlisle, Pa.

New Arrivals

Rev. and Mrs. Spurgeon Metzler, E. Franklin-st., announce the birth of a son Tuesday.

The first picture to be made and published of the infant, Jon Lindbergh, second son of Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, is presented above by International Illustrated News. Jon, brother of the kidnaped and slain Lindbergh baby, Charles, Jr., was born Aug. 16, 1932. He is pictured outside the kindergarten school in Englewood, N. J., he attends every morning.

Lindbergh Baby Guarded By Mother And Officers

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Fear for the fate of the elder brother he never saw shrouds the life of two-year-old Jon Lindbergh, keeping him ever within a circle of department of justice agents, local police and private detectives—and unceasingly within his mother's sight.

Daily, Anne Morrow Lindbergh steps into her car at 8:30 a. m. to drive her second son to kindergarten. She remains with him, driving back at 1:30 for lunch and a nap. Never does she relax her watch and it is her own capable mother's hand that clutches Jon's as the two traverse the few steps from car to school.

Should a stranger venture within the guarded circle, he is immediately investigated. For eight weeks recently, department of justice men and police shadowed five men who at intervals were seen lounging about the grounds. They looked like photographers, they said they were photographers, they were photographers—news-papers photographers trying to snap a "first picture" of little Jon.

But before they got through, the department of justice men had photographs of them, knew their automobile license numbers and even their telephone numbers, and had full knowledge of all their movements during the eight weeks, off and on, that they had spent seeking the picture.

The photographers learned all about the "investigation" later—at their offices, where they'd been checked.

The picture? They got it, but to do it they had to rent a truck with flap sides, cut holes in the flaps for their lenses and park along the walk where Mrs. Lindbergh walks with Jon to kindergarten.

MARX NAMED TO STATE JOB

St. Mary's Man Succeeds Henderson As Adjutant-General; May Direct Relief

CLEVELAND, Nov. 28.—Major Emil F. Marx, 42-year-old safety-service director of St. Mary's, O., and world war veteran, today was appointed Ohio's new adjutant general by Governor-Elect Martin L. Davey.

Maj. Marx will take over the duties as commander-in-chief of the Ohio National guard as now handled by Adjutant General Frank D. Henderson.

Whether Maj. Marx also will take over the important job of directing Ohio's relief activity was not divulged, Davey refusing to affirm or deny that Maj. Marx would handle both phases of the work.

It was believed here that Davey would go to Washington and confer with Harry D. Hopkins, national relief administrator, before reaching a decision on the matter.

MAY KEEP HENDERSON

Davey favors having a civilian assistant to the state's adjutant general handle the relief work and it was thought highly probable here that Henderson would be kept in that capacity. Henderson in his three years at the head of the state relief administration, has conferred frequently with Hopkins in his effort to get the maximum amount of relief money possible for Ohio.

Davey made it an announcement of Marx's appointment from his downtown hotel suite here.

Last night the governor-elect added another name to his official family by appointing Dr. Walter H. Hartung of Toledo as state director of health.

Hartung's selection marks the first time that any person from Lucas-co has been a member of the governor's cabinet in 20 years.

One major cabinet appointment remains to be made—that of highway director. Davey will announce his choice tomorrow. The two other major appointments aside from the cabinet, remaining to be announced are those of superintendent of banking and director of the state department of liquor control.

TURKEY THROW PROVIDES REAL FUN FOR MANY

26 Fowls Released from Roof Tops In First Three Throws

GREAT CROWD HERE

Each Turkey Dedicated to Local Merchant

Circleville had a "turkey throw" Wednesday and despite early apprehension for the safety of the traditional Thanksgiving fowl the party was a real success.

Ten turkeys were thrown into the crowd on N. Court-st from the Weaver building at 10:30 a. m., six more were released from the White furniture store room on E. Main-st., and 10 more were freed only to be caught from the roof of the Mecca restaurant W. Main-st. during the afternoon. The final throw of 10 more turkeys was scheduled from the roof of the Albaugh Co., S. Court-st., at 4:30 p. m.

NO TURKEY DAMAGED

Many persons were afraid of the consequences of the throw fearing that many of the turkeys would be maimed but in the first three throws none were damaged to any extent by the great crowd of persons who sought them.

Police officials and members of the sheriff's office were on hand to see that everything went smoothly. There was no trouble of any kind; the person who first had his or her arms around the turkey long enough to call it a capture.

It was a moment of good sportsmanship prevailed with scores of people filling the streets through the day.

The throw was made possible by merchants of the city in cooperation with The Herald. Each turkey before being released was announced through a loud speaker as a gift of some firm.

NEW THING HERE

A turkey throw is a new thing in Circleville although it has been done with more or less success in other places.

Many of the turkeys showed quite a reluctance to be captured but flew far and wide in an effort to get away. Some were free but only for a moment. One of the fowls flew to a wire in front of the American Hotel in the first throw of the day and defied capture until someone with a loop-pole dislodged it. It then flew onto the balcony and was captured.

Even those who didn't catch turkeys enjoyed watching the scramble.

FRENCH DENY JAPAN'S PLEA

Reject Bid to Denounce Washington Naval Treaty; Mussolini Would Too.

PARIS, Nov. 28.—France today rejected Japan's suggestion that this nation join in denunciation of the Washington naval treaty.

The government, it was learned, takes the view that the matter does not concern it as France is not participating in the present London naval conversations and is unwilling to become embroiled in the affair.

ROME, Nov. 28.—Premier Benito Mussolini will "politely but firmly" decline Japan's invitation to join her in abrogation of the Washington naval treaty, it was stated in official circles today.

TOKYO, Nov. 28.—The Japanese are prepared to "adapt" their original naval proposals, to which both the United States and Great Britain objected strenuously, to the new British proposals, it was reliably reported today.

The Japanese naval officials were understood to have drawn up a complete plan with figures showing how the Japanese proposal for parity in global tonnage can be fitted in with the British suggestions for qualitative limitation and non-fertilization of the Pacific.

PURVIS' AIDES, HUNTING OUTLAW, SHOT IN ROAD

Dillinger's Death "Avenged" By "Baby Face" When Hollis and Crowley Named as Trigger-men Die; Former Dies Instantly, Latter Later

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Shocked and embittered by the cold machine-gunning of two federal agents, the department of justice today detailed Hugh H. Clegg, stocky departmental inspector, to get George ("Baby Face") Nelson dead or alive—and Clegg's orders are to shoot first.

Clegg will supplant Melvin H. Purvis, head of the Chicago bureau of the department of justice, in the intensified hunt for the notorious killer. He left for the Chicago area today to take command of the search.

"GET NELSON," CRIES PURVIS

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Department of justice agents today renewed their vows to "get" George "Baby Face" Nelson, he of the cherubic countenance and death-dealing trigger finger.

"Get 'Baby Face' Nelson—dead or alive," Melvin Purvis, head of the Chicago bureau of the department of justice ordered his men.

"Nelson hasn't a change of escape," Purvis said. "It's only a matter of time."

"We aren't particular whether we get him alive or dead," Purvis added.

Their movements shrouded in secrecy, flying squadrons of federal agents, city, state and county police scoured Chicago, northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin for his hideouts today, bent on eradicating the late John Dillinger's madcap gangster.

Later yesterday Nelson avoided the slaying of his gang chief. Trapped by two department of justice agents at Barrington, Ill., Nelson shot and killed Herman E. Hollis, 28. Hollis is said to be the federal operative who fired the shot that ended the lawless career of Dillinger, the gang chief.

Samuel P. Cowley, inspector and first assistant to Purvis in the federal headquarters here, was shot twice in the abdomen and died in an Elgin hospital early today.

Before submitting to an emergency operation, Cowley summoned Purvis. Identified Nelson, identified the woman with him as the outlaw's wife. A male companion was unidentified.

Hollis and Cowley are the second and third federal agents to fall victims to "Baby Face." Last April 22, he shot and killed Agent W. Carter Baum when the Dillinger mob escaped from a trap at Little Bohemia lodge at Spider Lake, near Mercer, Wis.

HIDEOUT LOCATED

Nelson's hideout had been located as in the vicinity of Barrington, Purvis said today, and Hollis and Cowley were out searching for the exact location when they passed the gangster on the highway. He was headed towards Chicago. He was positively identified by the license plates on his car.

Cowley swung his car around and roared after Nelson, firing with a sawed-off shotgun and machine gun.

Mrs. Frances Kramer, owner of a filling station on the highway witnessed the chase. She said the fugitive car suddenly turned off the highway, stopped. Nelson and his companion leaped from the car, she said, yelling to the woman identified as Nelson's wife, "duck." She jumped out and dove into a roadside ditch.

Cowley and Hollis stopped their car, got out, and approached the bandits, one of whom had loaded a machine gun, handed it to the other, and then started loading a shotgun.

Nelson and his companion took shelter behind their car, and as Cowley and Hollis approached, Nelson opened fire with the machine gun, mowing down Hollis with the deadly precision of an executioner. As Nelson emptied his gun, his companion handed him a roadside ditch.

WINTER NEARING OHIO WEDNESDAY

Winter's formal entry into central Ohio, threatened several times today, appeared definitely scheduled for the Thanksgiving week-end.

Snow accompanied by sub-freezing temperatures today moved into Kansas on the edge of a low pressure area moving toward Ohio.

Nelson and his companion took shelter behind their car, and as Cowley and Hollis approached, Nelson opened fire with the machine gun, mowing down Hollis with the deadly precision of an executioner. As Nelson emptied his gun, his companion handed him a roadside ditch.

UNDERWOOD LEAD IS 9,299 BALLOTS

The official lead of Congressman Mel G. Underwood over Renick W. Dunlap was announced as 9,299 votes by the secretary of state today. The New Lexington man received 36,000 votes in the 11th district while Dunlap's total was 26,723.

Martin L. Davey selected Clarence Brown for governor by popular vote while Vic Dunsen's name over Sharon D. Fann was rejected.

GOMER JONES TO HEAD OHIO STATE SQUAD

237 Pound Center Named By Letter-men; Schmidt Would Change Team Name.

COLUMBUS, Nov. 28.—Gomer T. Jones of Cleveland, 207-pound center on Ohio State University's football team, today had been elected to lead the Buckeyes into their 1935 grid season.

Jones was elected captain of the team by his 17 brother letter-men at the annual football banquet tendered to the members of the team last night. He will succeed Regis Monahan, a senior. Ohio State's eight games this season, Jones was noted as one of the most powerful centers in Big Ten ranks. Stan Pincura and Dick Heekin were nominated for the captaincy, but were eliminated in later balloting.

OFFERS NO ALIBIS
Coach Francis A. Schmidt, freely predicting a championship season next year, was the speaker at the banquet. He offered no alibi for the one point defeat at Illinois which stood between Ohio State and a share of the Big Ten Conference championship glory. "We were a little slow in getting started, that was all," Schmidt declared.

Football fans, completely convinced of Coach Schmidt's ability as a football mentor following his successful first season at Ohio State, today were questioning his work as a prophet.

Shortly before the season Schmidt told the International News Service that "Ohio will be lucky to play 500 ball this season." The Buckeyes won seven games and lost the eighth by a one-point margin.

Acrobat Gridders in West Coast Classic

The circus came to the stadium when these acrobatic Stanford and California gridders clashed in their annual game at Berkeley. California's whirlwind defense is shown trying to block Alustiza's punt without success. Stanford won the thrilling contest, 9 to 7.

"A rip-snortin' animal with long antlers and fire shooting out of its eyes." That was Coach Schmidt's definition of a "buck." He offered his interpretation today as a reason for changing the nickname of Ohio State gridders from "Buckeyes" to "Bucks." Schmidt declared that "Buckeyes" had no particular significance, while everyone thought of "Bucks" as valiant animals, especially dangerous when cornered.

GRID SEASON TO END IN STATE

By International News Service
An end to the 1934 collegiate football season in Ohio was to be written tomorrow with the Turkey-Day games.

Although the gridiron menu had but few offerings, those of the cards were traditional, grudge battles. Where, no college games were scheduled, the fans planned to watch high school encounters.

One of the highlights of the schedule tomorrow was the Miami-Cincinnati game at Cincinnati tomorrow when more than 20,000 fans are expected to turn out to watch the fight for the leadership in the Buckeye conference. If Cincinnati wins, it can claim the championship, but if it loses it will be dropped into third place. The rivalry between the two schools started before the turn of the century.

Another traditional battle was the Wittenberg-Dayton clash. Although Wittenberg had the weakest team in years, students and alumni of the college promised to turn out strong for the annual classic. Equally as bitter was to be the struggle between John Carroll and Western Reserve at Cleveland.

WHITE WINS HONOR

The United Press today announced its all-Buckeye conference team and named Howard White at a halfback position—Other Wesleyan players on the team are Overturf center and Turley halfback who is also named captain—Smith, Kennaw, Mills and Mohler of Wesleyan are on the second team.

2 GAMES WATCHED

The football games scheduled tomorrow that will draw more attention here are those between the Detroit Lions and Chicago Bears going on the air at 10 a. m. and the Miami-Cincinnati fray in the latter city. The Detroit team must win or be eliminated from any chance for the national title, while the Miami victory over Cincinnati would give Ohio Wesleyan and Miami a tie for the BAA title.

CAGERS IN ACTION

The cage season was pried open at the high school this afternoon with Washington-two and the Tiger cagers tangling in a practice session—There is still much hope for an independent cage team here but nothing definite has yet been done.

JONES IS POPULAR

Selection of Gomer Jones fat boy center as captain of Ohio State's football team for 1935 was surprising to us although mighty pleasing—Jones is a poly-poly type of football player, but a splendid one and a mighty good team leader—His cheerfulness kept the line in good spirits through the entire season—At the start of this year Jones was believed not good enough for the team—With interest we read that Coach Francis Schmidt wants to change the name of the Ohio team from Buckeyes to Bucks—That's all their called anyway, Francis, so why not let it go at that.

BEFORE AND AFTER

Before modernization, this old gloomy house was just another old building, a left-over from another age.

After it had been given a modern beauty treatment, see the result. A new shingle roof, and a change in some of the lines of the building, have made it look like this, at a moderate cost. The funds for such improvements can easily be obtained through the Better Housing Program.

"NAVY BILL" QUILTS POST

California Mentor to Enter Business; First Assistant Is Given Post.

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 28.—Resignation of William A. ("Navy Bill") Ingram as head football coach at the University of California and appointment of Leonard B. ("Stub") Allison, his assistant for four years, as his successor, came with such suddenness that northern California fans were still gasping today.

Late yesterday afternoon it was rumored Ingram would tender his resignation last night at a specially called meeting of athletic officials at California. At 1 p. m. Ingram officially tendered his resignation to William W. Monahan, graduate manager. At 10:45 p. m. it was announced that Allison had been named head football coach and had been given a three-year contract, effective immediately.

It was also announced that Ingram was retiring to enter the business world.

Ingram's resignation came as a distinct surprise, following the amazing "fashion" in which his team wound up the present season. The Bears, unable to show their full strength until the annual "big game" last Saturday with their ancient rivals, the Stanford Cardinals put up a grand battle, losing 9 to 7 to the Cards.

The executive committee dispensed with dickerings and coaches in all parts of the country and gave spontaneous recognition to the general assistant coach under Ingram.

P. CONSTABLE TO HEAD PRINCETON

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 28.—Pepper Constable of Baltimore, Md., was the new captain of the Princeton football team today and a custom which had prevailed at old Nassau since 1915 had been cast overboard. Constable, fullback of the last two Tiger elevens, is the first backfield man to be elevated to the captaincy since Frank Glick quarterback of the 1915 team, was chosen. Constable was elected at a meeting of the Princeton football letter men last night.

TWO AGENTS KILLED

another and he shot down Crowley. The federal agents had time to fire but a few shots before they pitched forward, Hollis dead and Crowley critically wounded. Nelson's companion was believed to have been wounded in the leg by the federal men.

LOOKED AT BODY

As the agents fell to the ground, Nelson walked over to Hollis, looked at him, and then signed to the other indicating Hollis was dead. The wounded bandit climbed behind the wheel of the federal men's car. Nelson called to his wife who crawled out of the ditch and also entered the agent's automobile. Then Nelson stowed the two machine guns used in the gun battle in the car, walked back to his own machine, procured two more machine guns, four rifles, and a quantity of ammunition, loaded them in the federal auto, climbed in, and the machine roared away.

In Nelson's abandoned car was found evidence the gang was either planning a long trip, or was preparing to stock up on one of its hideouts. There were three suitcases containing men's clothing, several tins of motor oil, two brief cases, one containing rifle and shotgun ammunition and machine gun drums, and six sets of automobile license plates from as many states.

Two men were being held in connection with the gun battle today. They are Clarence Leader, gangster, and William Huston, saloon keeper. Police refused to say why they are under arrest.

Chicago police identified Nelson's companion as a Chicago gangster known as "Bo." Five special squads conducted swift raids on gangster haunts through the night, five of them on former Dillinger hideouts on the north side. Purvis revealed that two federal agents passed the Nelson car on the highway but did not recognize the gangster, just 10 minutes before Crowley and Hollis engaged the killers in the gun battle. The battle climaxed a 60-day search for Nelson and his henchmen in northern Illinois and throughout Wisconsin.

PURVIS WAS SAVED

Melvin Purvis was to have accompanied Crowley and Hollis, Purvis revealed, but a last-minute appointment delayed him.

Purvis is reported to have said to Crowley: "You go ahead Sam; I'll be along in another car."

Cowley was rushed to a hospital at Elgin and prepared for an operation. But before he would submit he asked:

"Have you called Purvis? I want to talk to him before I die." Cowley would not make any statement, even to physicians, refusing to report to anyone but his chief.

When Purvis arrived he held a whispered conversation with Cowley, then announced:

"Baby Face" Nelson was the driver of the car. We think the woman was his wife. We don't know who the other man was."

Purvis spent the night at the hospital, directing the Nelson hunt from a room near that occupied by the dying Cowley.

Questions and Answers
Is it possible to add chocolate to a plain cake recipe without varying the recipe? If changes are necessary, please explain why.

It is not necessary to have a special recipe for a chocolate cake, but it is important to make certain changes in the recipe because of the properties of chocolate. A one-ounce square of chocolate for each cup of flour in the recipe gives a rich color and flavor. Each square of chocolate contains about 1 tablespoon of fat, so a corresponding amount may be omitted from the amount of shortening in the recipe. Otherwise the cake will be too rich and crumbly. Each square contains a certain amount of starch and to this one extra tablespoon of milk should be added to the recipe. Without the liquid, the cake would probably peak, and crack on the top. The last change is the temperature for baking. Chocolate burns easily, so bake the chocolate cake in an oven 25 degrees cooler than you would use ordinarily.

Should candles be used on a table for luncheon meals?

Candles may be used to add color and brilliance to a dinner table, but the candles should not be used at lunch time unless the dining room is so dark that artificial light is actually required.

My canned vegetables show a ring of white deposit around the bottom of the jar. Is it too late to correct this now, I realize, but what can you suggest to avoid it next year?

It is quite possible that the white deposit was caused by the kind of salt you used. For canning you should select any good grade of bag salt or a clean coarse fine salt. It is quite possible that the table salt you used had starch added to it, in order to make a more free-running salt for table use.

How should pickles, sauces or condiments be served where table service is very simple?

Remove sauces and condiments to small glass dishes and accompany them with small serving spoons or forks. They should not be served in the containers in which they are purchased.

How should an angel food cake be frosted to prevent crumbs of the crust from discoloring the frosting?

There is a particular method used for frosting an angel food cake that differs from the frosting methods commonly employed for other cakes. This method is sometimes called "peeling." A rolling sort of motion is used, brushing the cake all over the top and around the sides, to remove the browned part of the crust. Then the cake is ready for frosting, and since the crust has already been removed, the frosting will not cause it to peel any more.

What would you recommend for removing an ink spot from a child's colored dress?

Removing ink from colored fabrics is always hazardous because it may be that the ink is more resistant than the dye coloring the fabric. This home method may be successful for your case. Soak the ink spot for a few hours in milk, changing the milk as it becomes discolored. Another method is to cover the spot with a paste made of dry mustard and cold water, and let stand for 15 minutes. The spot will usually disappear when it is washed.

There is a permanent method of removing ink from colored fabrics. It is to remove the ink without removing the color. When the stain has been removed, it is a good idea to wash the garment thoroughly with warm water and soap.

HEALTH SALE OPENS FRIDAY

Christmas Seals Placed In Hands of Number of Workers; Reports Are Filed.

The Pickaway-co health league will begin its drive on Friday, Nov. 30, Mrs. Fannie B. Kirk, executive secretary, announced today.

Workers have been assigned in all parts of the city and county and are ready for the starting time.

The activities of the health league are outlined in the following circular:

"This league is a voluntary organization made up of people of Pickaway County interested in any phase of health work.

"It consists of a President, two Vice Presidents, Treasurer, Secretary and Executive Secretary, elected at the regular annual meeting.

"These officers and five others chosen, shall constitute an executive committee.

"These officers are to sponsor the Christmas Seal Sale and take charge of all funds raised through the sale of seals, donations, etc., and use the same for health work among school children. X-rays for tubercular patients, as designated by Dr. C. C. Beale, our health commissioner and Miss Charlotte Phelps, our city nurse. All bills must be passed upon by the executive committee at one of its regular meetings. Work by the league has been done in all townships of the county. Much more being spent in some of the townships than the amount of their seal sale.

"The league takes care financially of those cases coming to the notice of the Health Commissioner, whose parents are unable to take care of such.

"The advisory committee consists of the Superintendents of Schools, and Health Commissioners of the city and county.

"During the year X-rays for tubercular patients, examinations and operations for adenoids and tonsils, dental care, glasses for school children and rooms at Berger hospital, was taken care of by our league.

"Health day program in the schools will be Dec. 14. Each pupil will be given an opportunity to buy one or more seals.

200 Attend Annual Inspection of Circleville Chapter O. E. S.

A very successful meeting and one long to be remembered by members of Circleville chapter Order of the Eastern Star was held in the Masonic temple, Tuesday evening, when 200 gathered for the chapter's annual installation of officers.

The meeting was preceded by a turkey dinner at 6 o'clock. The dining room was lovely in a color scheme of yellow and white with baskets and bud vases of yellow chrysanthemums centering the tables which were lighted with white candles.

The regular meeting was opened by the retiring worthy matron, Mrs. Leslie May. After the usual opening the following distinguished guests were presented:

C. C. Chapplear, past grand patron; Miss Marie L. Hamilton, grand conductress; Mrs. Erva Edwards of Gallipolis, grand Esther; Mrs. Kate Allen of Newark, grand Electa; P. R. DeVore of Columbus, grand sentinel, and Mrs. Jessie Schausel of Waverly, district deputy matron of district No. 23.

Mrs. Opal Gephart on behalf of the chapter presented the retiring worthy matron, Mrs. May, with a beautiful past matron's jewel and Irvin Gephart in very appropriate words presented the retiring worthy patron, Leslie May with a past patron's jewel.

Mrs. May was also recipient of a beautiful lamp and a lovely quilt presented by Mrs. Pearl Adkins and Mrs. George Foerst, respectively. The lamp was a gift of the officers of 1933 and 34 and the quilt from the O. E. S. sewing club.

Following the business of the chapter, the annual installation of officers was conducted with the following installing officers:

Miss Marie Hamilton, grand officer; Mrs. Mary L. Johnson, marshall; Mrs. Dora Barnhill, chaplain; Miss Carrie Johnson, organist; Mrs. Mary May, warder and Leslie May, sentinel.

The chapter room was beautifully decorated with yellow and white chrysanthemums. The installation of the five Star Points was a beautiful floral and candle ceremony in which the new worthy matron, Mrs. Opal S. Gephart, assisted the installing officer. Remarks were given by the distinguished guests.

Miss Hamilton presented the chapter a lovely picture of Robert Morris the founder of the Eastern Star and gifts were presented the installing officers by Mrs. Gephart after which the meeting closed in ritualistic form.

The following officers were installed:

Mrs. Opal S. Gephart, worthy matron; E. I. Gephart, worthy patron; Mrs. Pearl Adkins, associate matron; Earl Hilyard, associate patron; Mrs. Lucy E. Price, secretary; Mrs. Alice B. Cady, treasurer; Mrs. Marie Bennett, conductress; Miss Virginia Marion, associate conductress; Mrs. Gertrude Robinson, chaplain; Mrs. Daisy B. Price, marshall; Mrs. Maxine A. Leist, organist; Miss Elizabeth Tolbert, Adah; Mrs. Virginia S. Thacher, Ruth; Margaret Shane, Esther; Mrs. Helen C. Counts, Martha; Mrs. Ruthmary Marion, pro tem Electa; Miss Mary Roth, warder and Sam Morris, sentinel.

Marriages of Heirs Worry Exiled Spanish King

Beatriz and Maria Cristina

When former King Alfonso XIII of Spain attends the wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina in London, as a royal guest, it should set him to thinking of matches involving his own family. For the deposed Bourbon monarch recently found himself beset by requests of his children for parental consent to marriages of their own choosing. Several years ago, his eldest son, Prince Alfonso, of the Asturias, married a Cuban commoner. Now Don Jaime, and Don Juan Carlos, heir-apparent, are seeking to tie the marital knot. One of his daughters, Beatriz, is altar-bound.

Royal Guest List Nearly Result in Wedding Delay

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—A last-minute squabble between the Duke of Kent and his parents nearly succeeded in postponing his marriage.

From a member of the dashing duke's household comes the following sad story—fortunately with a happy ending.

Handsome George, at one time the naughty-naughty of the royal family, but now lauded as a hero on account of his marriage with the grateful Marina, has had plenty of private worries to mar his public happiness.

To begin with—and it almost ended with his marriage—the Duke is said to have written a number of letters to Sandra Rambeau, his American movie actress playmate of early summer.

Sandra is being worse than tiresome. She is refusing to return them. Furthermore, it is alleged, she threatened to publish them.

It is understood that several of Scotland Yard's "finest" are trailing the blonde movie actress with strict orders to get the letters—or else!

A week ago the Duke of Kent submitted to his parents a list of friends he would like to have invited to his wedding ceremony and reception.

The list bounced back pronto with most of the names struck off. George concluded that there had been a mistake. He put the names back and sent in the list again.

When it came back a second time with the same erasures, George's blue blood simmered to the boiling point. Before it cooled he marched into the presence of the King and Queen. In plain language he told them—still according to the source mentioned above—that unless he could have his friends at the wedding, there would be no wedding at all.

"There are only two occasions

in a man's life when he is important," he told his astounded parents. "One is his wedding day and the other is his funeral. I promise you both you may have your own way at my funeral, but on my wedding day I insist on doing as I please—I insist that my friends be invited."

The King and Queen, cornered, gave in.

That, dear friends, is how the Earl of Dudley, whose home, Himley Hall, in Staffordshire, is being lent to the royal bride and bridegroom for the first fortnight of their honeymoon, happens to be invited among others of the Duke's personal friends, to the ceremony tomorrow.

Everything is now completely in readiness for the nuptials.

The bride's trousseau has been delivered to her suite in Buckingham Palace; the silver lame bridal gown is only waiting to be donned.

The famous Windsor grays brought especially from the royal stables at Windsor Castle to draw the coach wherein the duke and duchess will drive from the palace to Paddington station after the ceremony have been put through their paces and declared hoof perfect.

FEW AMERICANS

Among the few privileged American-born guests at the wedding and reception will be Lady Cunard; the Duchess of Roxborough; Lady Granard, wife of his majesty's master of horse, who will ride by the side of his majesty in the procession; Lady Ribblesdale, Mrs. Ormonde Lawson, Johnson, who will wear a black velvet dress with black silver fox fur cape and a "Marina toque" of black ostrich feathers; and Viscountess Astor, M. P.—Nancy Langhorne of Virginia.

In a Thankful Spirit

The true observance of Thanksgiving Day does not manifest itself in the mere celebration of abundance.

That was not the spirit of the little band that first observed Thanksgiving Day. They had few worldly possessions. But their hearts were rich empires of courage, faith and hope. They did not give thanks for the small blessings of a single day; they were thankful for the possession of health, security, and the strength which they knew would enable them to go forward and conquer the hardships of a New World.

America today gives thanks in this old-time grateful, conquering, forward-looking spirit.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Thanksgiving

On the whole, thank goodness, it seems quite evident that this Thanksgiving Day will be much brighter for almost everyone, but, more important even than that, it seems that, the rigors of depression have taught us all the lesson of this grand old day—in the sense in which the fathers of our nation understood its deeper meaning.

May this Thanksgiving Day be filled with happiness for us all; and may each one of us be able to make the day a little brighter for those less fortunate, who live nearby our homes.

Marian Martin Pattern

PATTERN 9205
Complete, Diagrammed
Marian Martin Sew Chart
Included.

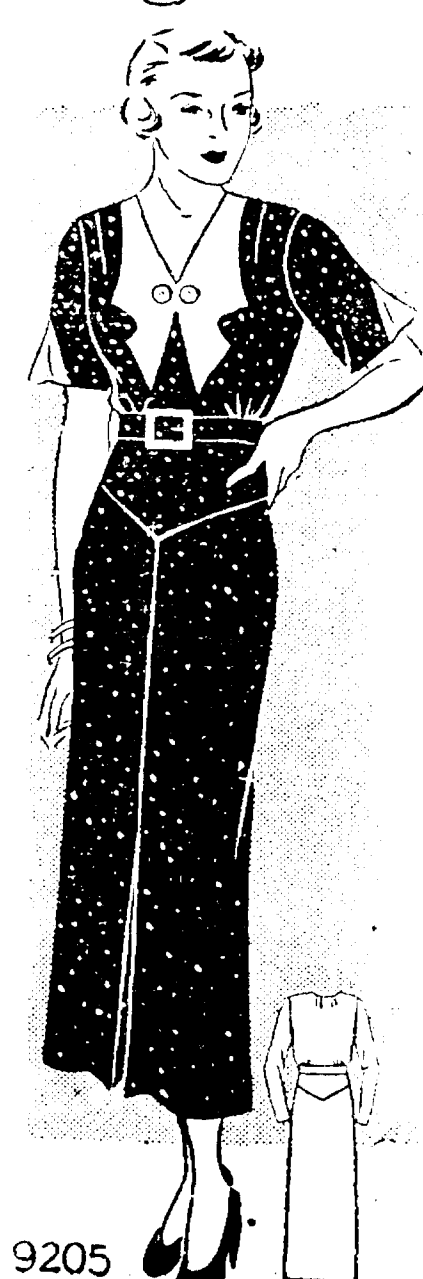

Winged sleeves and jabot of contrasting color give this smart "at home" frock a different and spirited air. It's a slenderizing dress as well, a slim skirt hung from a nicely pointed yoke back and front. Darts at the shoulders and gathers at the waistline give just enough fullness throughout the bodice to be becoming, and a kick pleat provides walking freedom. Made in wool with pique sleeve wings and jabot, this frock would be tailored enough to use for street wear; made in a pretty printed cotton it would be a charming frock to wear at home. Long sleeves come with the pattern.

Pattern 9205 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 requires 3½ yards 36 inch fabric and ½ yard contrasting.

HANDICAPPED LAW ENFORCEMENT

ATTEMPTS of the postoffice department to put an end to the use of the mails by promoters of lottery devices must be subject to serious handicap. It is confronted by the fact that the offense in such cases is committed by the sender rather than by the recipient of literature concerning gambling schemes, and that there can be no general censorship of mail at the receiving end with a view to the detection of those who make the postal service an agency of games of chance.

Postal inspectors have instigated arrests in five cities in their crusade against gambling. But sweepstakes tickets have circulated freely in hundreds of cities and thousands of lesser communities, partly by use of the mails, and many minor enterprises surreptitiously reach their patrons through the use of the same medium. All this is contrary to law—but so was bootlegging in the days of prohibition.

Law enforcement agency is up against the fact, the discovery of which by officials is recorded in despatches, that "the ordinary person who . . . bets on races and the like is not in the same class with usual criminals." So patrons of lotteries cannot be picked out of the rogues' gallery, or traced by other manifestations of their criminal tendencies, and that avenue of approach to principals and promoters is barred. The trouble with suppressing gambling, whether it uses the mails or not, lies in the fact that too many people like to gamble.

IN WINTER QUARTERS

ABOUT 355,000 young men, in 1664 camps are preparing to carry on through the coming winter the work of the civilian conservation corps. The program authorized by congress has still some months to run, and it is a virtual certainty that it will be continued beyond the two years of the present project, which automatically expires on March 31. There is still work to be done in the woods, and a great deal of it is not much interrupted by winter weather. But it is more important that there is still need for employment for young men and boys, and for the wholesome exercise and discipline which are a part of life in the CCC.

These modern backwoodsmen are well seasoned now to the outdoors life, and well equipped for the rigors of winter. More than $6,000,000 has been spent to put the forestry camps in shape for cold weather and millions more for the drought-relief camps.

It costs the nation about $2 a day to keep a young man enrolled in the CCC. According to Robert Fechner, director of the program, "the work has more than justified the cost." Its benefits must be reckoned not only in terms of forest clearance, fire-fighting, tree-planting and stream improvement, but also in the salvage of young manhood.

Scientists can now trace almost everything to its beginning except an idle rumor.

CAROLINE by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

CHAPTER XX

Caroline returned from the university in a cheerful mood. "There's a kick in being on the road, going somewhere," she said to her still disgruntled father, "no matter where it ends."

"It will probably end in your marrying a factory worker, like yourself," he retorted. "I wish I could fall in love with Malcolm," she said wistfully. "He's the finest man I've ever known."

"The motorcycle may help," Philip glibly, "propinquity, you know."

Caroline stared at him. Her clear, level gaze made him uncomfortable. She shook her head. "I've tried to let myself think that way," she said with startling honesty, "but it's something deeper he stirs in me. He hasn't kissed me, and I don't want him to."

"Afraid you'll be trapped, physically?"

"Not afraid. I wanted to find out how it is I feel about him. I mean, if I'd wanted him to kiss me I'd have quit, because I know I don't love him."

Her father uttered a sound of disbelief. "With all respect for your modesty, my dear, do you mean to say you've never been kissed by any one but Howard?"

The name was like a blow to Caroline. She was silent for a moment before she answered. Then, "Of course I have," she said evenly, "but Malcolm is different. I'm serious about him. It may sound silly to you but there's something idealistic about our friendship. If merely being near him could give me the kind of thrill that you suggest leads to marriage I'd be terribly disappointed."

"Still clinging to that hopeless attachment for Howard?"

"Not clinging. I'd give anything to forget him and fall in love with Malcolm."

"That's absurd," her father snapped. "I profoundly hope your love endures until the right man comes along."

Caroline smiled. "In the meantime," she said with a sudden turn to lightness, "I've my lunch to put up." She started toward the kitchen.

"Before you go," he stopped her, "could you let me have five dollars? I'm short of change."

Caroline obliged. It was not the first time she had given him of her small wages. But she never asked questions, sparing them both embarrassment, because in her mind was a growing conviction that he was a genuine, unselfish man.

She worried in secret, fell asleep thinking that she must succeed in something bigger than the favor which if they were to get away from Edge Street.

The next morning she was so silent when Malcolm called for her that he thought she was subdued by the idea of riding to work on a motorcycle with the gay humor which had seemed to him appropriate to the occasion turned to a blue reserve. Caroline, quick to feel his sensitiveness, brought herself out of her depressed mood, and re-established their usual cheerful companionship.

It was fun to ride on the motorcycle. The early morning blew roses into her cheeks and exhilaration into her spirits. She pitied people who lay abed, developing hangovers, grinning, "but you wouldn't refuse to go out in the dead of the day and poky motor cars."

Malcolm turned to glance back at her now and then and pass a word of banter. Her answering laughter was unfeigned. She was enjoying herself. She might stand all day at a machine that pasted labels on glass jars and think with acute longing of the breeze-swept golf course at the country club, but just now she had no wish to be anywhere in the world but with Malcolm on his motorcycle.

It was a fresh June morning. Traces of dew still lingered in shady spots. The air was sweet even in the grubby streets they traversed to reach the factory. When they arrived and Malcolm said, "Well, how did you like it?" Caroline replied that they must go some Sunday morning to a lake in the hills and have a picnic breakfast.

"We can take our lunch pails now," he told her, "and hop over to a park that's about a mile from here and eat under the trees."

"Every day," Caroline exclaimed. "Heavenly!" Caroline exclaimed. "I'll meet you here two seconds after the whistle blows."

The cars and motorcycles belonging to the factory employees were parked in an enclosure which, because of the hilly topography of the land, was laid at the side of the main building, close to the front. Those who used the entrance to the executive offices could easily be observed by anyone in the workers' parking ground.

True to her word, Caroline was there, waiting by Malcolm's motorcycle shortly after twelve o'clock. Malcolm was delayed. Caroline got out her compact and powdered her nose as she sat and did not stop for in the hat room.

A long, gleaming car purged up the main drive. Caroline caught a glimpse of it in her mirror and flashed around on an impulse she could not stay.

Her eyes remained glued on it and she was simply rooted to the spot, although her mind accepted the fact that it would be disastrous to her for the young man in the car to see her there—to discover that she was working under an assumed name in his father's factory.

It was the first time she had seen Howard since that fateful day when she had broken their engagement. Her eyes were hungry for him.

He did not glance her way—a delivery boy, which she breathed a silent prayer of gratitude. She watched him, without moving, as he got out of his car, flung the door to behind him and ran jauntily up the steps to the building entrance. He was a trifle thinner, perhaps, and tanned to a beautiful bronze. He looked as she remembered him—something like a model for good clothes. His light grey suit—had Park Avenue tailor stamped in every line of it and his soft Panama hat looked fine enough to be drawn through a finger ring.

Caroline held her breath until he had vanished from her sight. And in her heart was a new hurt. There was no touch of sadness about Howard. His air was that of a self-satisfied man. The loss of a sweet heart had apparently left no shadow at all upon his life.

A tear she could not suppress sneaked down her eyes and might have trickled down her cheeks leaving a telltale mark had she not seen Malcolm approaching. Malcolm in his loose-fitting working clothes, somehow looking as though they were only a disguise for him. Hastily Caroline wiped the tears away and smiled at him, chided him for keeping her waiting.

"How did you know our coach and four wouldn't turn into a pumpkin?" she demanded.

Malcolm's glance fell upon Howard's car. "It will—some day," he said seriously, "and when it does it's going to be a pumpkin like that bus over there. Beauty, isn't it?"

"I don't think so," Caroline declared and laughed at her snippy tone.

"Of course I know you're spoiled after this coach and four," Malcolm said, grinning. "But you wouldn't refuse to ride in a pumpkin, would you? Because I'm going to have one. Guess what kept me."

"I'm just out of guesses. There weren't any fresh ones on the market this morning."

"I've had interference with the supe. I'm going up in the world. Have another department to inspect—the powders."

"You aren't leaving the cold creams?" Caroline asked in dismay. "The powders are additional. The next step is into the supe's shoes when he becomes assistant production manager."

"It sounds fearfully important."

"It is. So don't let me catch you passing any crooked labels, young lady."

"Your success is assured in my hands," he told her. "But do you mind hurrying away from here? That one o'clock whistle will be calling us back before you know it."

"Right you are. And Ma put in a strawberry tart for you." How's that for a fairy godmother?" Caroline wouldn't tell him she'd lost her appetite, so she nibbled at her sandwiches and ate the tart, and was surprised to find that she relished it.

They were sitting under a willow by a brook. Caroline's radiant spirit of the morning and her false cheerfulness were gone beyond her power to recall. Malcolm saw that some secret trouble had claimed her. When the lunch was finished he smoked in silence, forbearing to press words upon her attention.

What was he to this girl, anyway? he asked himself, watching her as she stared meditatively into the clear water that whispered over the stones at her feet.

He felt a million miles away from her. It was the sense to him at that moment to dwell upon the warmth of her attitude to others. What else could she be, but tolerant and friendly, he demanded of his judgment, when he was always around doing his good deeds. She was kind, fair, not a snob like her father. How else could a girl like that treat him if she did not want to cut him altogether?

Caroline, absorbed in her thoughts, was unaware that she had spoiled their hour, thrown him into a study as deep as her own and filled him with doubts of himself, made his small rise at the factory a negligible achievement in his eyes.

"Some day," he told himself bleakly, "I'll kiss her if I'm not careful, and then what will happen? The end of little Willie!"

The thought was devastating. "Before you do that, you idiot, you'd better take that other job and keep away from her."

This was something he had not told Caroline—that he'd had a chance to go with Dunsforth's competitor at a better salary and had refused it to be near her.

She looked up at him suddenly, impersonally, and asked him a question.

"Malcolm, what's the best seller the factory produces?"

Malcolm was nonplussed. Had she, then, been dreaming of factory products? It stirred his sense of humor—he wanted to laugh, and did smile. He'd been holding his breath to wait and her mind had been busy with soaps and powders. But it was a relief, too. Better soaps and powders than some other man.

"The laundry crystals, I suppose," he answered.

"Are they good?"

"As good as any."

"Could they be improved?"

"I doubt it."

"What makes the most money?"

"Probably soap. You ask me I ought to know about that—it's the famous Rutledge formula."

"I know about it, yes, but not about others. Are there any others as good?"

"If there are the public doesn't know it. But you ask me I think the factory is kept going on the mask. The profits on the soaps alone wouldn't do it; they're too close. The velvet's in the cosmetics."

"Then if some one came along with a better mask, and the public found it out it would be a fine thing for the person who owned the formula?"

"It would be a gold mine—if it were really good, marvelous, as some of the girls at the factory say. There are plenty of so-so preparations—none that caught on like the Rutledge Mask. The way it swept the country was about like wildfire, but of course it didn't continue to sell like that. It holds as well as anyone could expect, though."

Progress in
The War on Cancer

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health,
New York City

FOR YEARS with many persons the very word "cancer" has aroused a feeling of horror. The disease is still dreaded, of course, but I am glad to say increased knowledge has eliminated a great deal of unnecessary worry.

Though the actual cause of cancer has not yet been discovered, various methods of treatment for this formerly incurable affliction are now known. I do not mean that all forms of cancer are curable.

able. But in most instances if the disease is recognized in its early stages, it yields to surgical, radium or X-ray treatment.

When cancer is pronounced incurable, it is a case in which there was oversight or neglect of the disease in its beginning. Unfortunately, cancer may be confused with other disturbances and not be recognized until it has reached an advanced stage. For this reason, the Society for the Prevention of Cancer urges that the public be educated in the early symptoms of the disease. Likewise, the public should be familiarized with the many possibilities of cure.

Over a quarter of a century ago the discovery of radium was made by those eminent French scientists, Becquerel and the Curies. Since then radium has played an important part in the treatment of cancer. Its rays are capable of destroying the cancer cells. Of course, radium must be used and handled with extreme care.

In many cases surgery is resorted to in the treatment and cure of cancer. When it is possible the diseased portion of the body should be removed. For example, when cancer of the stomach, intestine, bladder, rectum or other portion of the body is recognized in its early stages, prompt surgical measures result in removal of the localized disease. But if the tumor or cancerous growth has extended for a long period, operative results are rarely beneficial.

This is explained by the fact that when a cancerous tumor grows it tends to creep into adjacent tissues or to liberate cancerous cells into the blood stream. The latter process is medically termed "metastasis." It is the later stage of cancer that is to be feared and this can be avoided only by early detection of the disease.

Heed Early Symptoms
As a rule, persons who are likely to succumb to cancer are those who have the disease for some time before it is recognized and treated. Since cancer often strikes without warning we can guard against it only by paying attention to every unusual symptom, regardless of how trivial it may seem.

For example, in persons above the age of thirty-five, any sore that does not heal, especially about the face, mouth or lips, should arouse suspicion of cancer. Continued attacks of bleeding, or abnormal discharge from any of the orifices of the body, must be regarded as suggestive. Persistent indigestion, loss of weight, presence of a lump or swelling, should be sufficient reason to consult with a physician. It is always best to learn whether your suspicion is correct.

MOVIES

"Hide-Out," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture opening tonight at the Cliftona Theatre, is heralded as one of the wholesome film productions which leave a lasting impression upon those who see it.

It deals with a happy-go-lucky post-graduate racketeer who, believing he has everything one could wish for in life—money, without working for it, romance and pleasure—comes to his senses after he has been driven from New York by the police, only to find real love and happiness in a rural environment.

The picture is said to be crammed with all of the excitement and glamour of Big Town life and the purity and simple existence of a rural community.

As "Lucky" Wilson, the playboy, Robert Montgomery has a made-to-order role. Reluctantly he is compelled to find a country hideout to escape arrest, but he soon becomes entranced with the country when he meets Maureen O'Sullivan, cast in the role of a farmer's daughter.

AT THE GRAND
Warner Baxter returns to town Wednesday and Thursday at the Grand theatre in "Such Women Are Dangerous." Supporting him are Rosemary Ames, Rochelle Hudson, Mona Barrie, Herbert Mundin and Henrietta Crossman. There will be a special matinee Thanksgiving day.

Use Herald Want Ads For Quick Action at Low Rates -- Telephone 76

The CINCINNATI HERALD and THE UNION-HERALD CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING INFORMATION

All ads are restricted to their proper classification and to the regular Circleville Herald style of type. The publishers reserve the right to edit or reject any classified advertising copy.

Advertising orders for irregular insertions take the one-time rate. No ad is taken for less than a basis of three lines. Count five average words to the line on paid advertisements.

Charged ads will be received by telephone, and if paid at Circleville Herald office within six days from the first day of insertion cash rate will be allowed.

Ads ordered for three or seven times and stopped before expiration will be charged for only the number of times the ad appeared and adjustment made at the rate earned. An ad ordered seven times will be published in the Union-Herald (Weekly) and will be counted as one insertion, as will three-time ads ordered printed in Tuesday's or Wednesday's issues of the Daily.

Ads received up to 10:30 A. M. will be inserted the next day. A charge of 50 cents is made for publishing Cards of Thanks.

Special rates for yearly advertising are given upon request.

LEGAL NOTICE

IN THE COURT OF COMMON PLEAS OF PICKAWAY COUNTY, OHIO

No. 17307

The Buckeye State Building and Loan Company, Plaintiff.

L. P. Johnson, et al. Defendants.

The defendants, William A. Countz and Rachel L. Countz, husband and wife, each of whose last known place of residence was 311 South Wall Street, Columbus, Ohio, the defendant, Clara Johnson, whose last known place of residence was 25 South Drexel Avenue, Bexley, Ohio, and the defendant, Fama Johnson Miller, also known as Fama Johnson, whose last known place of residence was 36 Hudson Avenue, Columbus, Ohio, but each of whose present place of residence is unknown to the plaintiff and cannot with reasonable diligence be ascertained, will take notice that, on or about the 17th day of September, 1934, The Buckeye State Building and Loan Company filed its petition in the Common Pleas Court of Pickaway County, Ohio, being case No. 17307 upon the docket of said Court, against them and others, among other things, for judgment against the defendants, L. P. Johnson, William A. Countz and Rachel L. Countz, in the sum of $1000.00, with interest from September 9, 1934, on a certain promissory note and for the foreclosure of a mortgage to secure the payment of said note against the following real estate situated in the Township of Scioto, County of Pickaway, in the State of Ohio, and described as follows:

Beginning at a stake northeast corner to John Lane's land, thence north 81 degrees east 163 poles to a black oak; thence south 1 degrees east 140 poles to a stake in the line between Shaw and Flitzgerald; thence south 81 degrees west 58 poles to a stone, southeast corner to John Lane's land, thence north 5 degrees west 30 poles to a stake, northeast corner to said Lane, thence with Lane's line south 81 degrees west 105 poles to the line of said Joshua Williams' land, thence with Williams' line north 9 degrees west 60 poles to a place of beginning, containing ninety (90) acres of land, more or less, being a part of Survey No. 1139, Excepting therefrom eleven acres that was transferred on the Tax Duplicate in the Auditor's office of Pickaway County, Ohio, to William Welsh on December 17, 1928, and also eleven acres that was transferred on said Tax Duplicate to Mary J. Wilkins on June 1, 1929, leaving sixty-eight (68) acres hereby included in this description.

And alleging that said mortgage is the first and best lien against said real estate; that the conditions of mortgage have been broken by failure of the defendants to make payments on said note according to its terms; that each and all of the defendants have or claim to have some right, title or interest in and to said real estate; and further praying that said real estate be sold and the proceeds thereof paid from proceeds; that each and all of the defendants may be required to set up in said case any right, title or interest which they or any one of them may have or claim to have, in or to said real estate, or be forever barred from asserting the same; and that plaintiff may have all other and further relief to which it may be entitled either in law or in equity.

The defendants, William A. Countz and Rachel L. Countz, Clara Johnson and Fama Johnson Miller, will take notice that they are required to answer said petition on or before the 15th day of December, 1934, or judgment may be taken in accordance with the prayer of said petition.

Prohibition Enforcement during the early months of the New Deal is once more on the Government payroll.

Dalrymple's first tenure was as brief as it was turbulent. The brawny Californian was in office only a few days when he declared war on the press, then turned round to shelve Commander John D. Pennington, ace of the dry service's field directors.

But a few weeks after he had prepared to ship Pennington off to Hawaii, Dalrymple had his picture taken with his arm around Pennington's shoulder.

Shortly thereafter during Cummings' reorganization of the dry bureau, Dalrymple was out.

Now he is back as a member of the legal division of the Federal Communications Commission.

Seated at a desk in a large room, crowded with many other workers, the one-time dry generalissimo is as expansive as ever, describes himself as the "official hand-shaker of the Commission."

Merry-Go-Round

Harvey Couch, former member of the RFC, is at work on an expansion of the Commission.

Marks of Distinction, In Fact

By IRVIN S. COBB

A CHARITY worker was making a visit to a poor woman in a small country town. Four little children in the family wore glasses. "What a pity!" exclaimed the visitor sympathetically to the mother.

"It seems that all your children have trouble with their eyes!"

"There ain't nothing the matter with their eyes, ma'am."

"Then why in the world do you make them wear glasses?" asked the charity worker.

The mother stared at her caller.

"Why, I like specs on young children," she said; "I think they're real dresy."

tensive expansion of his already large water power properties in Arkansas. He has just entertained a group of prominent industrial and financial leaders, among them Owen D. Young, Charles G. Dawes, and Rudolf Hecht, president of the American Bankers' Association, at his summer home near Hot Springs, Ark. Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt, wife of the President's second son, has set a style among Virginia's smart riding and fox hunting set. At the first of this season's famous Loudon hunts she appeared in a white leather spats coat with hat to match. Senator Democratic Floor Leader Joe Robinson's indignant rejection of Senator Vandenberg's offer of a partisan truce during the coming session of Congress has an ironic angle. In 1930, following strong Democratic gains in Congress, Joe joined with Alfred E. Smith, John J. Raskob, and Jack Garner in a public statement, extending a similar offer to President Hoover. The declaration stirred up such an outburst of criticism in Democratic circles that the Democratic leaders who backed it hastily withdrew.

IF YOUR BREATH HAS A SMELL YOU CAN'T FEEL WELL

When we eat too much, our food is our enemy. Our stomachs are decay coming on of our indigestion. We feel the decay all over our body. We feel gloomy, grouchy and no need for anything.

What makes the food decay in our stomachs? Well, when we eat too much, our liver can't digest it. What is the most vital digestive organ in our body? Unless 2 pints of bile are secreted by our liver every day, our movements get hard and our body every six minutes.

When our friends smell our bad breath (but we don't) and we find the taste in our mouths, don't be too hasty to conclude. Get at the cause. Take a course of Liver Pills which gently cleanse the flow of your bile. Bile is "better" is offered you, don't buy it. It may be a calomel (mercury) pill, which loosens teeth, gripes and kills in many people. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name and get what you ask for.—24, C. 1934, C. R. C.

PENSION FUND IS CRITICIZED

COLUMBUS, Nov. 28.—The legislature was criticized today by M. L. Brown who is in charge of the old age pension set-up for failing to make a larger appropriation for administration costs. Brown blamed the situation upon the failure of the legislature to grant more than 5 per cent of the appropriation for administration of pensions.

CHIMNEYS CAN GIVE TROUBLE IF BADLY BUILT

Fire Hazard Accentuated By
Faulty Flues; Smoke
Causes Given.

Property owners are urged to make a careful inspection of their chimneys before the winter season begins.

Attention is called to the fact that defective chimneys are responsible for much of the annual home fire loss, especially on farms, and that chimney fires are most frequent in early autumn when fires are first built.

Repairing and replacing defective or inadequate chimneys are a part of the modernization program of the FHA, which points out that the best time to modernize chimneys is before cold weather sets in.

Every chimney should be inspected before the first fire of autumn is built, it is stated, because bird nests or other obstructions may have accumulated in it during the summer, or bricks and mortar may have become loosened. If the fireplace persisted in smoking last winter, or if there is possibility of insufficient insulation, a chimney expert should be called in to make the inspection.

Some Common Faults

Some of the more frequent structural faults of chimneys are pointed out by FHA officials.

One frequent fault is lack of sufficient height to cause a good draft. Wind frequently blows down the chimney when the top is below the ridge of a peak roof. The top of the chimney should be two feet higher than the ridge of a peak roof and three to four feet higher than a flat roof.

Another frequent fault lies in the chimney lining. Few chimneys have special linings and the gases from the fire disintegrate the mortar. The smoother the lining of the chimney, the better its draft. Fire clay lining is among the most efficient materials providing a smooth surface and also protecting the bricks and mortar from disintegration.

Openings into the chimney shaft should be as few as possible, one opening being the best, and care

Housing Question Box

Q. I want to build new chicken houses to accommodate about 200 birds. What type would be most satisfactory from the standpoint of economy and convenience?

A. The shed type of house would probably suit your needs best. It is usually built facing the South, with windows on the southern side and with a roof that slopes slightly downward toward the North. The advantage of this type is that it is cheap to erect and may be built as long (from East to West) as needed and lengthened easily whenever necessary. It is generally divided into partitions about 20 ft. square with wire mesh.

Q. There are several doors in my house that rattle. Can I fix them myself without removing the doors? If so, how?

A. This condition can be corrected by moving the strike plate back toward the stop, thus moving the play between the latch and strike plate.

Q. I weatherstripped my house throughout last winter, but the house remained cold. What is the trouble?

A. There may be many reasons for this condition. Your heating plant may be undersized, either with regard to boiler or radiator. You may be losing heat through roof and side walls. There may be cracks around window and door frames. Have an expert examine your house and advise you.

Q. I own 10 small houses, all unimproved and rented, and in a year's time would have the $3,000 necessary to repair and modernize them. However, I want to do the work immediately. Can a special ruling be made in my case, or will I have to be limited to a $2,000 loan?

A. A bulletin issued recently by the Federal Housing Administration says:

"No property owner may obtain credits to improve more than five separate pieces of property (not exceeding $2,000 principal amount of obligation on each property) without the prior approval of the Federal Housing Administration."

Q. I plan to build an addition to my house which will cost about $3,000. Can I get an FHA insured loan of $2,000 to help finance the work?

A. You may apply for a $2,000 loan to help finance a $3,000 building project.

Q. As I sell a seasonal product, my income is much greater during one part of the year than during the other months. Would I be permitted to make seasonal payments on a modernization loan under the terms of the National Housing Act?

A. The National Housing Act provides that only farmers may make seasonal payments. All others must pay monthly.

With financial institutions and manufacturers now cooperating with the Federal Housing Administration by making insured loans for modernization and repair of these properties, observers in the East and Middle West report rapidly increasing reconditioning activity on rural properties.

In addition to remodeling homes, rooms are being added, heating plants, electricity with appliances and bath facilities are being installed so that old houses look strictly modern. Cellars are being floored with concrete and rearranged, providing room for laundry and work shop and storage space for seeds, canned goods and preserves. Leaky roofs on both farms and barns are being repaired or replaced; new fencing is being built, feeding floors laid—in fact, reports from Indiana, Iowa, Illinois and other Corn Belt states reveal many farmers doing their own work or overseeing the job with no small amount of satisfaction.

With few exceptions farmers generally are found to be able to comply with the provisions of the project. The special feature permitting them to repay the loans in season is particularly appealing because of the improved outlook of agriculture as a whole.

In several places visited, farmers were doing their own work, especially painting. Rebuilding was left to skilled mechanics. Under the terms of the project, a borrower may take cash, but materials and necessities where and when he likes and make the repairs himself. He can have a contractor do the work and the lending agency pay him or he can have a contractor do the work and give him a note which he, in turn, will sell to the lending agency.

LEAKING RADIATOR VALVES AT FAULT

In 62 per cent of winter heating troubles, leaky radiator vent valves on one-pipe steam systems have been at fault, according to a survey made during a cold spell last winter. In 23 per cent of the cases studied, the trouble was caused wholly or in part by undersized or antiquated boilers. In 18 per cent, the boilers needed repairs, 15 per cent disclosed a lack of sufficient radiation, and in 12 per cent of the cases, the trouble was traced to improper piping. Some of the other causes discovered were poor drafts from dirty chimneys or chimneys of the wrong size or height, improper firing, and unsuitable fuel.

Careful diagnosis by a competent heating expert is the only way to determine what adjustments are necessary. If the estimate for repairing the system is too large a sum to be paid conveniently at one time, desirable loans planned by the Federal Housing Administration may be had from local financial agencies working in conjunction with the Better Housing Program.

spent in this work. Labor at sources of material, such as mines and forests, get seven cents and transportation labor four cents, making a total to labor of all types of 76 cents.

The remaining 24 cents goes to building supply dealers, to manufacturers, for raw material and for transportation.

LABOR HELPED MOST

76 Per Cent of Modernization Funds Go to Workers.

Labor gets the lion's share of the dollars that are going into the modernization and repair work being done under the Better Housing Program of the Federal Housing Administration, say official reports.

The larger part of labor's share goes to residents of the community in which the work is done. They get 44 cents out of every dollar.

Factory, mill, and dealer labor get 21 cents out of every dollar.

You, too, will be glad to discover the economy of gas heat — using the fuel that involves no incidental costs. And you'll be surprised at the ease with which your coal furnace is converted into a modern gas-fired unit. Let us tell you about it.
